Kushog spraying to start this week

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Spraying for tent caterpillars on Kushog Lake will begin this week, says Marie Thomson of the Environment Committee for the Kushog Lake Property Owner's Association.

Members of the association met with a representative from AgricAir, the King City based company that will be doing the spraying, last weekend to finalize the details. The group went over a revised list of those who wanted their property sprayed, and then completed a map for the pilot.

Forms were mailed out to the property owners earlier in the year asking them if they wanted their property sprayed. Approximately 240 people replied to the first mailing, but over 200 owners did not respond at all. Nineteen did not want their property sprayed, and four were adamant that none of the spray touch their property.

"Overall people were interested in the idea," said Norma Goodger, a member of the committee. "So we contacted the spraying company. Originally we had hoped to spray Crown land, but the process of getting permission was too long, and it would have been too late (to spray)."

After contacting the spraying company, the association mailed out contracts to those interested in the project, along with information on how to go about contracting the company. Each individual property owner has a contract with the company.

Property will only be sprayed if the owner indicated that they were interested, and sent in the contract. If the property owner objected to the spraying in the mailing their land will not be sprayed, nor will their neighbours', even if they requested spraying. That way none of the spray will drift onto the property of those in opposition.

"We are taking great pains to respect people's wishes," said Goodger. "The spraying company can be quite specific about where they drop it."

The cost to the property owner will be 27 cents per foot of water frontage, based on the frontage indicated on the contract. For someone with 150 feet of frontage, the total cost works out to $40.50.

"It is a small price to pay to save even one tree," wrote Goodger in the Kushog Lake newsletter. "If the spraying reduces the caterpillar damage, I will consider it to have been worthwhile."

The spray being used is known as Dipel, and it occurs naturally in the environment. Thomson, who was

Lutterworth hit with 15.8% taxation hike

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Lutterworth council passed their budget last week and residents of the township will see a 15.8 per cent increase in taxes this year.

According to Reeve Carol Puffer, the township is faced with the "same problems and the same expenses" as usual. But with large increases in the county and educational levies, she's surprised the overall tax increase isn't higher.

"We were able to come in at 15.8 per cent overall. I know that's a large chunk, but we're being bombarded from all directions."

Lutterworth's increase for elementary education comes in at 13.8 per cent, while an extra 18.7 per cent will be paid for secondary education. "The county is one we didn't expect to deal with," said Puffer. The county levy increase is 11.2 per cent.

Puffer said out of 10 municipalities, Lutterworth is being slapped with the highest county levy increase. "I'm still trying to figure out what transpired in Lutterworth last year that's any different from elsewhere," she said.

"There's a large convoluted formula that's used to formulate county levies," she said. "I still can't fathom why Lutterworth is up so high."

The overall increase means a difference of $40 a year for the average taxpayer.

AHM residents face 12% tax increase

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Minden ratepayers will see a 12.48 per cent increase in taxes as council passed their budget in a special meeting last week.

According to Reeve Ray Moore, council originally expected an increase of up to 32 per cent, but major cuts were made to keep the increase to a minimum.

"We had to work very hard on it, and had quite a few meetings," Moore said in an interview. "We had to do some slashing in our parks, so it was fortunate that we had $78,000 in the parks reserve fund." The municipality of Anson, Hindon and Minden recently accepted and matched a $78,000 grant from the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation to begin major work on a park plan. "That will help our parks budget considerably," he said.

In drawing up their budget, council was faced with a 22 per cent municipal levy increase ($750,601), a 13.2 per cent education levy increase ($842,721) and an 8.8 per cent county levy increase ($236,971).

In order to keep the overall increase down, Moore said there have been considerable decreases to roads expenditures. Transportation was decreased about 25 per cent from last year's budget to $833,830.

"The budget is not reflecting what we are trying to do," said Moore, adding that projects will have to be delayed.

"This year is a bite-the-bullet year. It has been forced upon us to increase taxes." Unconditional grants from the province only increased one per cent to $236,248. "They were cut a little bit," he said. "We can cry and scream all we want, but we have to deal with what we have."

Moore added that he would like to see an increase in commercial and industrial assessment. "If you don't have assessment and growth you're in trouble."

Newsletter explains plans

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Lutterworth residents will find a newsletter along with their tax bill at the end of June if all goes according to council's plans.

Normally information regarding general items such as dog tags is printed on the bottom of the sheet which shows the mill rate, but an extra page will now be inserted to keep residents up on any progress in the township.

At last week's council meeting, Reeve Carol Puffer said the newsletter will "update taxpayers" on items such as the landfill sites or the proposed industrial park. She said information regarding which fire department each resident should contact in an emergency could also be included. "A lot of people think that they should just phone Minden, when it could be the Norland department that services their area."

She said the newsletter would also help inform people about the new controlled access at Lutterworth's three landfill sites. "What happens after hours is just awful... If we had the co-operation of the residents it would make things easier, but some people just don't seem to care."

HCSA loop fundraising drive is underway

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Fundraising for the snowmobile loop in Haliburton County is under way, and forms asking for donations from businesses are in the mail, says Mark Lester of the Haliburton County Snowmobiling Association.

The association has decided to start a levy system for those businesses that are benefitting from the snowmobiling industry in the area. They have put together a program soliciting the businesses for support. Businesses have the option of paying the full amount at once, paying in installments, paying less than requested, or not paying at all.

Every four to eight months the businesses will be solicited again in case of a change of hands or a change in attitude. Lester says so far the response from the businesses has been outstanding.

"The initial response was overwhelming," he says. "People were taking the sheet and sending us cheques even before the first mailing. They want to make sure they have the winter business they've come to rely on."

The money collected by the association will be used to maintain a 200 km section of the 640 km snowmobiling loop, which travels around the perimeter of the county. The trails will also be widened into a dual lane, so that twice as many sleds can use them before moguls start to appear.

Two new grooming machines will be able to comb the loop and put it into shape overnight. The feeder trails will be gone over in approximately one day using five smaller machines.

Lester says the grooming is essential for providing safe snowmobiling in the area. He says 175 sleds used the trails on an average weekday last year, and trail counts were up 30 per cent last winter.

"We want to be able to continue providing safe snowmobile trails," he says. "If the trails get rough people start to take the roads and the lakes."

Monmouth tax jump held to 9 per cent

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Ratepayers in Monmouth township have received one of the lowest tax increases in the county—a 9.02 per cent rise over last year.

The largest individual increase was seen in the municipal levy, which jumped 14.78 per cent (from $188,544 last year to $216,409 this year). Most of the increase was as a result of the environment. In order to fence the dump, and provide a caretaker for it, over $8,000 had to be budgeted.

Fire protection also received a jump in funding. Over $35,000 was allotted, in order to purchase new paggers and air packs for the crew. Clerk-Treasurer for Monmouth Township, Sharon Stoughton-Craig says the increase will only occur if the township receives a grant for fire protection.

The budget for roads increased by approximately $193,000 this year. However, Stoughton-Craig says the bulk of the money will be received from the Ministry of Transportation. The ministry will be contributing $343,000 of the $428,000 total because the funds will be used to build a new garage.

General government expenditures decreased more than $3,000. The figure was higher last year because

Education an attack against family violence

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

PUTTING THE PRESSURE ON took on a double meaning for Jude King. Her mandate as a counsellor for the Family Violence Safety Network included working towards an end of wife assault. Women had to know no one had the right to hit her, men had to know violence isn't the way to express oneself, and society had to know it can no longer turn a blind eye to violence in the home. However, with 75 clients to take care of on a 24-hour-a-day basis, the pressure on King herself was also mounting.

Enter Annegreth Gerrard. A former rape crisis centre counsellor, she has recently been hired to take some of that pressure off of King and double the efforts to bring about change.

Then there's the formation of the Family Violence Co-ordinating Committee, comprised of representatives from the OPP, Kinark, Probation and Parole, ministers, the Children's Aid Society, the Women Teachers Federation as well as the safety network. This group will focus on educating the county on the problem of wife assault, why it must stop, and what they can do to help.

Before, when King was working by herself, with the help of volunteers, she was having to devote most of her time to counselling and crisis intervention. Trips to court in Lindsay had to be made, calls for help would come all hours of the day and there were the ongoing counselling and groups support sessions.

"I'm very much in support of that concept—you need 24-hour-a-day coverage—but what suffered is the public education part of my job. In order for us to end violence, we need to provide that key part."

Last year, 75 women came to King for help, and among them they had 122 children whose needs also had to be considered. Sometimes men would call for help too but the safety network has always focused on women. This is now reflected in the new name of the network, the Women's Safety Network. It's receiving a lot of support from the community but there's still room for growth.

Rather than feel gloomy because there are so many women in the county needing the network's help, King is glad her message is getting across. "It's a positive sign because we knew the assaults were taking place. Now women are stepping forward and believing they have a right not to be assaulted."

It is estimated that a woman will be assaulted 30 times before she reaches out for help. Demoralized and loaded with guilt, admitting that she can't solve her problem by herself takes a lot of courage.

"Quite often they have taken steps to others, who tell them 'You're exaggerating, it can't be true,'" says Gerrard. "These women really need to be believed, they need someone who listens to them, encourages them, supports them, and also connects

Strong economy slows need for social service spending

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

A stronger economy has meant fewer people are needing financial assistance from the County of Haliburton Social Services Department.

"In April we continued to enjoy the fruits of a good economy," director George Davidson told county council recently.

In April of 1989, the general caseload was 99; in 1988 it was 124. There is, however, an increase in the demand for supplementary aid and special assistance. Thirty-four households made applications this year, up from 22 the previous year.

"People are accessing our office more often," Davidson said later. The agency was first established two years ago, and as word gets around about what funding is available, more people will make applications. Davidson said that special assistance primarily helps the "working poor", those low wage earners who may have special health or educational costs. The program can help them pay for drugs, prostheses, transportation, the cost of moving to where work is available and surgical supplies for home care. Last year, when it became clear there wouldn't be enough county funds, "we put the brakes on dentures but we still went over budget."

While some of these resources may seem like "luxuries", Davidson points out that the person on social assistance gets dentures because he or she can't eat, not for a prettier smile. Likewise, if a person has no way to get to a job, they can't get off assistance.

People on mother's allowance, social assistance and the Canada Pension Plan can also tap into these services. "If normal assistance isn't covering basic needs, then it won't cover the special needs so they're coming to us more often."

When someone applies for assistance, they must pass the needs test. Because some do not like revealing their financial status, there are still some people who are needing help but not getting it, Davidson said. Added to that is "there's still the old stigma of coming to welfare."

The funding structure for the two special programs has the province paying 80 per cent of the costs and the county picking up the remainder.

Lutterworth adds to clock fund

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

The council of Lutterworth township has approved a $500 donation to the Staunworth Memorial Clock Fund.

Responding to a request by Anson, Hindon and Minden, township council agreed to the donation at last week's council meeting.

But councillor Bill Valentine remarked that the request should have come from the Staunworth clock fundraising committee. "I can't see why it's from the townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden. It's none of their business," he said. AHM council had already approved a $1,000 donation and sent letters off to Stanhope and Lutterworth requesting that they match that amount in order to get the ball rolling on further donations.

Spray won't harm land

originally opposed to the idea of spraying, says it is biological and contains no chemicals so it will not harm the environment.

"When they (the association) said to look into spraying my gut reaction was 'forget it.' I didn't know what was involved, I only thought of an airplane dropping chemicals," she said. "But I owed it to everyone to look into it, and I found out that a biological product was available. I would have never put myself in the position of recommending a chemical."

Goodger says Dipel can be found in the water and soil, and will disappear in seven days. She says it only affects butterflies and moths, and anything larger would not be able to eat enough of it to be harmed.

In order to be effective the spraying has to be done while the caterpillars are young, and the Dipel must be eaten by the caterpillar in order to work.

The female moths lay eggs on small branches of trees in the early summer. The eggs hatch the following spring, and the caterpillars migrate from their host tree, which include oak and maple sugar, in the approximately the middle of June. The migration period lasts about a week.

The caterpillars strip the host trees of their leaves before migrating, and towards the end of June they spin cocoons, and emerge as moths two weeks later. After mating the female will lay a band of eggs, covered with a dark, foam-like substance.

The loss of leaves will not kill the trees, and they will produce a second set of less dense leaves in five or six weeks. The insect may weaken the tree, which when combined with drought and other environmental problems, may reduce the annual growth of wood, or sap in the maple sugar trees.

The only other alternative to spraying would be to remove the egg bands by cutting and destroying the twig they were laid on. This method is practical if only a small number of trees are affected, and provided the eggs can be removed before hatching.

Attitudes determine success at work

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Is the working world getting you down? Well, you're in line with a number of others. Statistics say over a million people hate their jobs, and according to Ray Daly, founder and president of the Attitude Development Institute, the bottom line to all those problems has little to do with knowledge or skill.

Daly, who spoke at the regional CITC conference at the PineStone last Thursday, says our attitudes are the hidden factors deciding the success or failure of our motivation and efforts, especially in the workplace. Daly, who had worked in hospitals for 20 years before hitting the seminar circuit, says people spend too much time dealing with symptoms such as stress and burnout, rather than dealing with the problems themselves.

He says too many people blame their problems on their upbringing and their environment. "Until we accept responsibility for our attitudes, then our problems will never be solved," he says. Also, if one's attitude is keeping an individual from attaining his goals in life, he must realize this and change his problem attitudes.

Too many people just glide through life without using their brains, says Daly. "We teach people what to think, but do we teach them how to think? We're too busy blaming things on others to do any thinking. And it's very difficult to think in this society because thinking means changing."

People also take things for granted and don't ask enough questions, he says. "Questions really bother people. The person who is always asking questions is perceived as a boat-rocker. But questions are necessary in life. Like, why put an exit sign above a door? In case of fire, right? I knew there had to be a reason." But Daly explains that, in case of fire, people are told to crawl around on the floor because smoke rises. "If you crawl around on the floor, how are you going to see the exit sign on top of the door? If your intention is to have the sign to save people, it isn't going to work."

Daly says most people are afraid to question decisions made by others, and that this attitude must stop. "A committee doesn't necessarily make the right decision, but they make the popular decision. We're following all these people because we think they can't all be wrong."

It is also common, he points out, for people to dwell on their mistakes, rather than on their accomplishments. "One pessimist can drag down one hundred optimists easier than the other way around. If I told you that nine people in this room like you, and one doesn't, what do you think you'll be thinking about for the rest of the day? You'd be thinking, 'What am I going to do to get all 10 people to like me?'" And these insecurities result in a great deal of stress.

Skill and knowledge have always been the focus of attention, says Daly, because they can be so easily measured. But he thinks attitude is actually responsible for 85 per cent of the successes that people enjoy.

So people have to accept the fact that they aren't perfect, and learn to see the good and bad within themselves. Daly says people who claim they are objective about themselves are wearing blinders.

"I don't think we can be objective because we're human. The most subjective thing you can do is to say you're objective. Objectivity means you see the good and the bad in things."

Daly cites the employee performance appraisal as the worst thing to do if you want to improve someone's productivity. "It's the same all around. We dwell on the negative. If you say someone is excellent in nine things and no good in one, they will be worrying about that one bad thing. And it doesn't make any difference what our intentions are, it's the affect that counts. We're masters at dealing with the symptom without ever dealing with the problem."

Beef producers vote down commission

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Seventy-two per cent of producers who participated in Ontario's beef cattle marking vote said "no" to the establishment of a producer-controlled marketing commission.

"I'm pleased to see that it was defeated," says Godfrey Tyler, Haliburton County's representative of the Ontario Cattlemen's Association (OCA).

"As far as marketing goes, there's no change," says Tyler. "Basically this vote has rattled a few cages. The OCA is now looking at developing some immediate short term objectives to outline how to address the future."

The mail-in vote gave Ontario's beef cattle producers an opportunity to express their opinion on the future of their marketing system, as recommended by the Beef Marketing Task Force.

In a press release, Jack Riddell of the Ministry of Agriculture says "a significant percentage of Ontario beef cattle producers has voted to maintain all of their marketing options, including direct-to-packer sales." Now all members of Ontario's beef industry are being urged to work together to achieve change and improvements.

Ideas and information are being put together in two stages of the OCA's Blueprint For The Future. In phase one, a discussion paper will be taken to cattlemen at regional meetings this fall and annual meetings next winter. "We want the discussion paper to stir up new ideas, and better ways of doing things," says OCA president Jim Magee.

The second phase will build on the first by undertaking a long term study on the Ontario beef industry, possibly at the new George Morris

Women urged to try new trades

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A new emphasis is being placed on encouraging women into non-traditional trades, says CITC consultant Art Franklin.

Franklin, who monitors the training of apprentices in Peterborough, was in the county to attend the CITC's regional conference at the PineStone Inn last week.

Currently there are 1,000 registered apprentices in four trade areas: motive power (for jobs such as car mechanics), industrial (tool and die makers), construction (carpenters, plumbers, electricians) and service trades (cooks, bakers, hairdressers).

He says only 3 per cent of regular apprentices are female, and most of those are training for traditional jobs such as hairdressers and cooks. But the Ministry of Skills Development now requests that when industrial consultants such as Franklin go in to the schools for career days that they push construction, industrial and motive power trades.

"There's a mindset. Men go into the trades, and women don't. The ministry is doing more to make young women aware that other trades are available and to encourage women to enter those trades," says Franklin.

Franklin usually speaks to students in Grades 7 and 8, when many are still considering options for their future. He says many girls at that age are considering secretarial jobs.

"We show them a slide presentation showing women in the workplace to get them thinking at age 11 or 12 about their potential. There are so many opportunities available that these girls don't consider."

"We also give them a comparison of wages, comparing what they'd earn in an office to what they'd earn if they had a plumbing or electrician's license. We're setting a range of options before them."

A job listing for a plumber in Peterborough recently offered a $17 an hour wage, says Franklin. "I had an apprentice only in his third year making $25 an hour during the oil boom in Alberta."

And more jobs are becoming available as the trades people who have been in the workforce for years are becoming older and getting closer to retirement age. "Many of these people were imported from Europe, and there's a concern now that there's not enough people to take their place."

"There's a mindset. Men go into the trades, and women don't," say CITC consultant Art Franklin, who adds that trades are becoming more technical. "The day of the grease monkey is over."

Also, some trades are experiencing great technological advancements. Franklin says General Motors is coming out with new Cadillacs which feature 22 onboard computers. "The day of the grease monkey is over," he says of the stereotypes associated with the work of mechanics. "More maths and sciences are becoming involved, and these trends are more demanding."

He also says these jobs are less physical, an aspect which often keeps women away from non-traditional jobs. "At car dealerships these days there are people who only deal in computer technology. So we're really encouraging girls to enter the motive power trade."

There is still the problem of some employers who are reluctant to hire women for such jobs. "They have a mental block, and communication is needed to get them over it."

Out of 150 motor vehicle apprentices monitored by Franklin, only one is female. "I think she took some automotive subjects in high school and really liked it. She was in a class with all boys and did just as well as any of them. Now she's just about ready to do her provincial exam. There's no limitations on her because she's a girl."

However, she is faced with prejudices while on the job. "Most of the fellows she works with are gentlemen. At one place, though, her employer had to tell someone to keep his hands to himself. It can be difficult, especially for women working in a male-dominated trade."

Franklin says a motor vehicle mechanic requires 9,000 hours of apprenticeship and three eight-week courses at community college.

"It depends more on whether you've got the smarts, rather than work." And some jobs have their disadvantages. "Construction has a tendency to be seasonal here. You can't lay brick or block in the winter because the mortar freezes. In Toronto it isn't such a problem because construction jobs are bigger and they can do indoor work during the winter. But here the jobs are small."

So apprentices in construction are sent to school between the months of November and February when the weather is bad. Even though the work is seasonal, Franklin says jobs are plentiful when the weather is good. "Usually construction is affected by the rise and fall of the economy. If they're not selling, they're not building. But the economical climate has been good."

Franklin says part of his job is in encouraging employers to hire apprentices. He also gives young people guidance in finding work. "You have to bother people to get a job. That's one of the main stumbling blocks for young people. They'll send out their resumes but won't follow-up. They're hesitant or frightened to talk to people."

It frustrates Franklin when employers phone him asking, "Do you know of a qualified mechanic?" My biggest job is in encouraging employers to train. Right now all mechanics who want to work are working. The rate for a mechanic is increasing because there's such a shortage. Employers have to realize their role in helping young people learn."

Franklin also tries to teach young people that learning a trade "is securing your own future. People are retiring. The jobs are there. A trades license is a stepping stone to other jobs." Franklin has a steam fitter's license and an electrician's license which got him in his present line of work. He says there are also jobs available at community colleges for those who wish to teach their trades. "It opens many doors of opportunities if you're qualified."

Mr. Chips moves to bypass in Minden

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Mr. Chips has found a new location in Minden. The owner of the chip truck, which has been sitting in the downtown core since last summer, was told to move by Anson, Hindon and Minden council at a meeting two weeks ago.

But at last week's meeting, council gave Derwin Barry permission to operate the stand at B & J Esso at the junction of Hwys. 35 and 118.

Council had previously decided against renewal of Barry's operating license because of complaints by the Business Improvement Area. Barry assured council he would start operation of the truck at the new location only after the concession meets with all regulations.

He said both Imperial Oil and the operator of B & J Esso have granted him permission to run the food truck, which will be located in the parking lot between the building and the phone booth.

Barry also asked council for permission to operate the food truck at all events held at the Minden fairgrounds, but was told he must approach each individual fair board with this request.

Bylaw enforcement officer Brad Bradmore recommended that a six-month temporary license be issued by council on a trial basis.

SENIOR DRIVERS!

The government wishes to keep seniors in their own homes as long as possible. This is ONE reason the Canada Safety Council is anxious to hold classes to upgrade driving skills for seniors. It is advertised as '55 Alive for Mature Drivers'.

The Superannuated Teachers of Ontario (S.T.O.), combined with H.C.H.S.S. headed by Carl Wallace and directors, are holding three seminars over 18 months. The first one is July 10, 11 and 12, 1989 at PineStone Inn. Teaching, films and discussion periods will form the morning sessions (10:00 a.m. - 12:00 noon), and afternoon sessions (1:00 - 3:00 p.m.). Lunch is included each day at PineStone.

Each seminar will consist of about 30 persons. Those nearer the age of 80 should attend the first seminar. Admission fee of $10.00 is due when you attend. We are hoping you will take advantage of this government plan for senior drivers - 55 and over. When you phone, state name, age and phone number to:

Norm Gilmore, Kinmount 488-2165

Jim Ross, Wilberforce 448-2645

Norm Wallace, Carnarvon 489-2409

Edna Sedgwick, Minden/Haliburton 286-2671

The first 30 names should be in by June 30.

Low wages discourage students from gaining valuable experience

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Heidi Whittaker is expecting a pretty tough time in getting young people involved with the Work Orientation Workshop she's co-ordinating this summer. After all, the kids will have to work 40 hours a week at $3.90 an hour through WOW, where they could get at least $5 an hour at a job they find themselves.

But if 14 to 16-year-olds want an experience that could help them get even higher paying jobs in the future, WOW is the way to do it, says Whittaker.

WOW is part of the federal government's student summer employment program, and its initiative is to help those who might potentially quit school and who have the capacity to complete their education. It provides them with a learning experience on the demands of the labour market, so that they will have this orientation before they decide to drop their education.

A educational assistant at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School, Whittaker plans to run the program from June 26 to August 25. And the program is funded fully by the government. "It doesn't cost employers anything. All they have to do is help us out with those kids that lack motivation."

Many kids suffer because of a lack of social skills, or because they are impulsive. "Some of them have never worked before. They don't know what it's like to get a paycheck."

The program is geared toward young people who aren't sure of themselves and lack self-esteem. "If these kids get a job on their own, they might not be sure how to handle it. They have to learn things like how to take constructive criticisms."

During the first three weeks of the WOW program, participants will be involved in workshops and earn $10 a day in the form of a $150 lump sum at the end. From July 7 to August 23 the students are on the job earning $3.90 an hour.

Even though the pay is lower than most can get by finding a job on their own, Whittaker says kids who go through the program will get an experience that will last a lifetime. The workshops teach interview techniques, proper dress codes, how to do resumes as well as helping a student to build their self-esteem. Whittaker also plans on having fun things like picnics and cookouts with the students. "A lot of these kids cannot communicate with adults or with people their own age. This program will help us all look at someone else as a whole person, so we'll learn from one another."

"They don't feel they need help. We have to convince them of the importance of having a job and keeping it. The job they get may not last."

Whittaker wasn't involved in last year's WOW program and says the employers were picked before students even signed up. "This year we'll get the kids first to find out their interests, so we can try to match the kids to the their jobs. And I'll try to accommodate the students by finding employers in their areas so they won't have far to go to work from home."

Although she has received tremendous support so far, Whittaker still needs the kids to participate in the program. She says it's hard to convince them that the program will be beneficial. "They don't feel they need help. We have to convince them of the importance of having a job and keeping it. The job they get might not last."

Whittaker plans to meet with each employer and student at least once a week once the job portion starts try another.

"Things are really changing now. You need an education. It's not okay to be on welfare or unemployment when you are capable of working. The government is providing money to maybe help eight kids from ending up on welfare or even in jail. We have to keep trying to prevent kids from quitting school."

Along with guest speakers and video presentations, Whittaker hopes to show kids in the WOW program just what would happen if they did quit school in Grade 8. "They need to see how much rent is, and the cost of furniture. A lot of them have no idea how much cars are and how much gas is."

Another creative field trip she might try is a simple trip to the grocery store to teach kids how to budget. "Everything we do they can apply to real-life situations. If you are in trouble, with no job, where do you go?"

She is also pleased to hear positive responses from people in the community, because in the long run, the community will benefit. "I feel there is a great need for this program in the area. To build the economy you have to have kids who have been exposed to different job opportunities."

FAX machines are new education tool

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Some school boards in other parts of Canada are making use of advanced technology such as computers, videos and FAX machines to help alleviate the problems of bringing curriculum to remote schools and students in rural communities.

Public school trustee Ed de Grosbois of Sherborne et al attended the First Canadian International Small Schools Conference in Montreal earlier this month and says he learned of "some exciting new ideas in the current thinking about rural education and about the quality of education in small schools."

There are alternative methods for the "delivery of curriculum to small schools for students who are removed from a school in terms of distance," says de Grosbois. "The social effects of busing can be detrimental to a student's sense of community. When students are bused for an hour or so they can feel alienated. They have no real sense of community."

The county levy was only up 0.45 per cent this year (from $44,290 last year to $44,489 this year), while the education levy jumped 11.82 per cent. The elementary school levy went from $153,000 last year to $169,000 this year, and the secondary school levy went from $117,000 last year to $133,000 this year.

Unconditional grants remained the same as in 1988, at $86,899.

Transit problems still exist

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Kinark Child and Family Services will not be receiving the Variety Club van.

The van was donated to the Kinark head office in Toronto by the variety club at the beginning of the year. Each branch of the Kinark organization was invited to submit a proposal outlining their different reasons for needing the van.

Andre Breton, the director of the Haliburton branch of Kinark, says transportation in the Haliburton area has always been a major concern.

"We have a lot of clients who have limited or no access to a vehicle," he says. "Fortunately we have an agency vehicle available to us, so we are not as affected as some of the other agencies in the area."

If the local Kinark had received the van, they would have serviced other local agencies, such as CHACE Place, and the Children's Aid Society, with it.

"We would have set up a driving service where all organizations would have access to the van," said

Breton. "There would have been a minimum charge to cover the operating costs."

"Right now we are back to where we started from. People still need the service, and frankly I'm not sure how we are going to solve the problem."

Beef vote forces action

Centre at the University of Guelph.

"It's basically the collecting of ideas dealing with marketing issues and new product development," says Tyler. "We're looking at new and different ways to prepare beef, such as for the microwave lifestyle. Then we're also looking at working on a code of practise for producers. Primarily it's about doing research on how to get maximum gains on low costs."

Tyler says the vote has forced the OCA to take action on some modifications. "Any group always needs fine-tuning and improving in some ways."

"What this vote has done is show that it's clear that cattlemen will make the changes for cattlemen. It won't be a quasi-government organization. It will be producers making changes in their field."

Recycling takes root with J.D. Hodgson students

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Students at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School are trying to put back into the environment what they take out.

Leona Carter, a grade seven teacher at the school, started a recycling program in September, and the school bought two crab apple trees with the money they made from the project.

"Recycling makes sense," says Carter. "We are losing our trees, and we're running out of space for our garbage."

"Every weekend edition of the Toronto Star uses up ten acres of trees," add the children gathered around her.

Posters were put up around the school at the beginning of the year, and recycling boxes were given to each classroom. Students were asked to put in any tin cans, glass bottles or fine paper they may have used.

Carter's class would collect the material, and load it into their teacher's car to be taken to the recycling bin at the dump. The cans and bottles had to be washed out, and the labels peeled off, before they could be crushed and put in garbage bags.

The fine paper was taken to Levis Paper Company in Toronto, where the students were paid for their trouble. The company offered $80 per tonne of fine paper, and the students at J.D. Hodgson raised $30, enough to buy the two trees. Carter expects that they will be able to make another trip to Toronto when the students "clear out their desks in June".

The grade seven class planted the trees on the lawn in front of the parking lot at the school last Wednesday. Carter, Vice-Principal Gerry Irish, and two custodians helped the children with their task.

Two holes were dug, with the children all taking a turn with the shovel. Water was carried from the garden in big white buckets and dumped in the hole with some soil, and manure, until a thick mud oozed in the hole. Finally, after what seemed like hours of mixing this concoction, the trees were removed from their planters and each was carefully placed in a hole.

The rest of the dirt was used to fill in the hole and pack it neatly around the stem of the tree, before the children stopped to admire their work, and congratulate each other.

"Digging up the ground and swishing everything around was fun," said Kelly Morrison, 12. "It will be something to remember the school by."

Carter says the children are very aware of what is going on in the world, and they talked about recycling and what was happening to the forests of the world in current events, and geography. They all watched with hawk eye's to make sure that everyone was recycling.

"Anyone who tried to throw fine paper in garbage can, was reminded about the recycling program," said Carter.

The children, with their awareness of what is occurring in the world, decided that something needed to be done to stop the damage being done to the forests.

"I think it is needed to save the trees so there is oxygen left," said 12-year-old DJ Gunning. "We need oxygen to survive, so it is not good to cut down so many trees."

"We need to recycle trees for the animals in the forest," added Jamie Fryer, 13. "The animals in the rain forests are dying because there is no more habitat for them to live in. We need animals to live."

The children also agree that recycling needs to spread to other schools in order to be effective.

"We need to try to encourage other schools to do this," said Gunning. "To save our planet."

Council approves rezoning

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Anson, Hindon and Minden council approved a temporary industrial rezoning for Applied Stress Technology on Blairhampton Road at a special meeting last week.

Owner Gerry Vandenbrink appeared before council in order to obtain a temporary rezoning for his property, and several Blairhampton residents turned out to voice their concerns. Council approved the temporary rezoning for a three-year term.

Vandenbrink told council there is a growing demand for his product, a device used in computer-monitored weigh scales. He wishes to expand the business, which doesn't conform to present zoning restrictions, and said he would move it to Minden's proposed industrial park when space becomes available. "The only other thing I could do (until that time) is go to Haliburton, which I really don't want to do," Vandenbrink told council.

Vandenbrink said the new building would be moved well away from the present road and from his home, and that his closest neighbours are more than 400 feet from the property. He added that the manufacturing business would produce no noise or pollution.

"Up until now, nobody has questioned us, and nobody even knew we were there," he said. "I don't think we're polluters. We obey all the laws. We don't feel we're infringing on anyone."

Vandenbrink stressed that he only wanted a temporary rezoning and would cancel his application if the industrial park came through. "Spending all this money on a temporary basis, that's the thing I hate."

He also said the largest amount of land used would be up to one and a half acres in a 2,500 square foot building. Presently employing five people. Vandenbrink says he would hire five or six more.

Preston Gallant of 12 Mile Lake said the township should encourage businesses like Vandenbrink's. He said Applied Stress is a clean business with no pollution and added that Vandenbrink's yard isn't cluttered.

"I think we should encourage more businesses like this, especially when it doesn't pollute. He's training our young people a new trade rather than washing dishes or cooking. I think he should be congratulated for bringing a new industry into the area."

Ken MacLeod was the first resident to speak out against the proposed rezoning. He told council that he is friends with the Vandenbrinks, and that he respects and admires Vandenbrink for bringing his business to Minden, but added that

Snowmobiling attracts tourists

Snowmobiling is considered to be an integral part of winter tourism in the Haliburton Highlands, and the association hopes that by improving the condition of the loop, the industry will continue to grow.

"Haliburton is the heart land of snowmobiling in the country, and the loop is a major attraction," says

Lester. "We're already getting calls from people who want to tour the loop this winter."

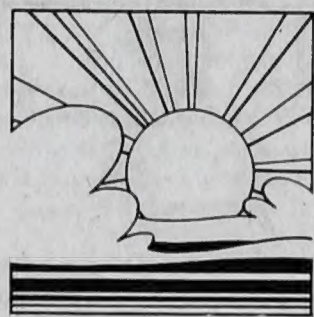

The Haliburton County Snowmobiling Association is well known for their commitment to the sport. Their signing program makes it possible to snowmobile without getting lost. A colour-coded trail map points out gas stations, restaurants, and accommodations, located right on the trail.

Lester says snowmobiling is essential to the local economy. He says over $10 million annually is brought into the county through the industry.

"If we screw up, the economic impact we're enjoying now could be an economic disaster," he says. "It is more than just running a bunch of snowmobiles around."

A vital debate

It is characteristic of human nature that each of us, from time to time, imagines how much more pleasant the world would be if everyone saw things the way we do. Life would be less stressful, less frustrating. The tensions that arise from disagreements would be absent. But so, too, would the energy that stems from the interplay of ideas. It is precisely because each of us is unique, and interprets the world in the light of our cumulative experience, that life is dynamic and challenging. We cannot shape the world in our own image, so we must strive to live harmoniously with people whose views we cannot share, whose attitudes we cannot embrace.

It would be naive, if not irresponsible, to argue that disagreements are always healthy, that divergent points of views can always coexist without violence or recrimination. But in a society that recognizes tolerance and understanding as fundamental to the social order — a society like Canada's — it is not only possible for people to hold and express different points of view, it is essential that they do so. As history demonstrates, violence and misery are not the consequences of reasoned debate, but of repression and tyranny.

In Haliburton County, as elsewhere in Canada, all of us are fortunate to have both the means of expressing ourselves — at council meetings, public forums, in letters to the editor — and the freedom to do so without fear of recrimination. It is a right none of us should fail to recognize and appreciate, because it is a right that only a small number of the world's population enjoys.

Debate — reasoned, tolerant, thoughtful debate — is always to be encouraged, not resented. Yet, human nature being what it is, many people find it difficult to accept other individuals' fundamental right to hold and express a point of view that differs from their own.

In Haliburton County, few local issues have prompted more debate in the pages of this newspaper than has the plan by the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association to create a new trail loop and undertake a campaign to attract more snowmobilers to the area. People on both sides of the issue have written thoughtful letters in which they expressed their opinions for others to consider. The debate has not been a comfortable one for many people — the Echo's publisher included — but it has been and continues to be, an important one, because it touches on issues that are at the core of life in Haliburton County.

Recently, a person involved in the snowmobile industry asked the publisher if he sensed some kind of 'conspiracy' afoot in Haliburton County, by which he meant to wonder if there was an organized campaign underway to malign snowmobiling. There had, after all, been a significant number of letters to the editor which expressed cautionary words about the trail expansion plan. The assumption, perhaps, was that there had been an equal number of letters in support of the HCSA which had not made it into print.

In fact, what has happened in the past few weeks has happened on other occasions, with issues that were perhaps equally significant, but less emotionally felt. News stories have reported the facts, and enabled the HCSA to make its plans known to the public. People have responded to those plans in the manner appropriate to their own philosophies. Many have embraced it wholeheartedly and committed funds to make it a reality. Others have expressed reservations based on their own experiences and attitudes. The letters published have been the letters received. If more letter writers have positioned themselves on one side of the debate than the other, there is nothing to be inferred except that on this particular issue, those with reservations have been more inclined to make use of the Letters to the Editor column than those who support the HCSA proposal.

The debate has been thorough and important. At times, perhaps, each side has misconstrued or overly simplified the other's point of view. But it has demonstrated clearly that while people's attitudes and philosophies may differ, they can share the world in harmony if they are guided not by animosity and resentment, but by wisdom and tolerance.

Hydro will listen to concerns

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

The May 10, 1989 article titled "Pressure can Stop Spraying" by Martha Perkins highlighted the contents of a meeting sponsored by CHANGE (County of Haliburton Advocates for a Naturally Good Environment), and unfortunately contained information on Ontario Hydro's forestry practices which were inaccurate.

Hydro forestry staff have made many presentations to cottage associations, townships and counties explaining herbicide application practices and have never refused an opportunity to listen to customer concerns. Herbicides used by Ontario Hydro for the economical control of incompatible vegetation have federal and provincial approval for use. Licensed and trained applicators meet, and often exceed, stringent Ministry of Environment guidelines for herbicide application.

Since the announcement of Hydro's 35 percent reduction in herbicide use, many hours have been spent pursuing and evaluating mechanical brush cutting equipment and the planting of smother/cover crops to control unwanted vegetation without herbicides.

Customers notified of any pending forestry activities on their property by Ontario Hydro should direct any questions or concerns on those activities to the Area Forestry Supervisor for clarification.

Yours truly,

T.H. King
Forestry and Environment Supervisor
Georgian Bay Regional Office.

Field trips a benefit

To the Editor:

After reading an article in the Echo this week regarding student field trips I am concerned as to whom would benefit from their loss, certainly not the students. Perhaps our school board is more concerned with the threat of liability insurance than the wonderful benefits of student travel?

If Quebec is not a stimulating field trip another one can be chosen. Certainly one can not question the unrivaled opportunity of experiencing another part of the world, this enhances one's knowledge of geography, culture-sociology, economics, and history. Not all children come from the same background and it is certainly unfair to assure that they would all have the opportunity to travel for education through their families. If Mr. Groisbois thinks in three days that the only intent should be to practice language, he is sadly missing out.

It takes a special kind of teacher to be creative in selection and willing in attitude to take the responsibility for a field trip. When I was a student I had the opportunity through fund raising to travel from my public and high school education. I am forever grateful to that system and those 'special' educators who stimulated my mind. Our problem was always getting enough money together, however in this case if there are extra funds perhaps they can be rolled over and put towards the next trip.

If the board reviews its policy on field trips and they don't take all of these factors into consideration, I believe politics and the bureaucrats win out. If the benefit to the students was being considered, there would be no question as to the relevance to their education. If you need ideas try these. Science North, The Science Centre, The Royal Ontario Museum, Cats, Phantom of the Opera, Kingston-Fort Henry Museum and Sir John A. McDonald's House, Agawa Canyon, The Thousand Islands, Quebec and Montreal, Tours to Private Industry, Lumber Mills. Judging by the number of students and teachers who ask me to investigate potential field trips, it seems like the only sticklers are the board!

Must respect environment

To the Editor:

Arlene Edwards' letter in last week's Echo contains some valid points, some invalid points and ends by attacking the people she disagrees with rather than their ideas. Nevertheless, she helps people on both sides of this issue to focus on the two key issues: The environment and the economy.

Few would disagree that our county is a place of great natural beauty and that we all have a moral

IN DAILY CONVERSATION with friends the subject of how fast the village of Haliburton is growing and changing seems to be right up there on top of what we will call our talking list. Some people think that we are growing too fast and that we are losing some of that home town identity. I personally think they are right on both counts. Just what do we mean when we say we are growing too fast? Does it mean that we are getting caught up in the rat race and that we hardly have time to say hello to our neighbours or could it be a case that we like to keep everything the way it was and that we are out to knock progress at every turn? Let's face it, we can't stop progress and we can't stop proper development. Many people who have enough money to keep them the rest of their lives or are living off large pensions seem to be against changes and development. These people must stop and realize that the rest of us have to make a living here twelve months a year and we can't afford to turn down anything that is not harmful to the environment. I'll be the first to admit that the trees are beautiful, our lakes and rivers are wonderful but we can't make a living just by sitting back and looking at them. We must have businesses and small industries that employ people year round so that they in turn will have money to spend in the community. We could be losing some of our small town identity but this is all part of a changing world. We go down town now after having lived here all of our lives, and we are lucky if we recognize two people out of ten that we have the opportunity to meet. Most of these people are now year round residents who are now your neighbours and mine.

I just happened to be in one of the local food chain stores in Haliburton recently and when I looked around to see how many were in the store I realized that I didn't know anyone. I think this is great and we should welcome new faces in the community. These are the people who will be bringing new ideas to us and many of them are already very active in local affairs. Let's get used to the idea of having new people in the community and stop and realized that we are only going through this old world once so let's stop and get a little fun out of it while we are at it.

Joan Irish, chairman of the Haliburton Highland Games, was telling me that other day that they way the bookings are coming in for the games that we should be in for a great success. It would appear that more bands are coming than originally anticipated and that the World's Best Pipe Band "The Frasers Band" who make their headquarters near Oshawa, will be here for the big event. Joan also told me that in an effort to accommodate the huge crowds as far as food is concerned more concession stands will be needed at Glebe Park and they hope that more people will come forward to help.

I have mentioned here in my column on numerous occasions that the Highlands of Haliburton never seems to receive the kind of recognition that it so rightly deserves. When it comes to publicity or media coverage we always seem to be the forgotten county. I think that certain signs are showing that we are seeing a bit of an improvement in this area, but in my estimation we still have a long way to go. I have mentioned this problem several other times but I seem to come back to this subject every time I hear one of our neighbouring communities mentioned and we are left right out of the picture. It's no secret and you would be surprised at the number of people who reside in Toronto, which by the way is only 140 miles from here, who have never heard of Haliburton or Haliburton County. I was having a form filled out in Toronto a couple of years ago and the girl taking down the information asked me if Haliburton was in the United States.

Congratulations go out this week to Ernie Scott of Haliburton who celebrated his 98th birthday on May 31. Up to this time Ernie has been in very good health and I can remember seeing him piling wood and doing other jobs when he wasn't out taking his daily walk down town and back. He is now a patient at the Haliburton Hospital where he received many cards and flowers on the occasion of his birthday. I join with his many friends in wishing Ernie many more years of happiness and good health.

Meals on Wheels a service provided by the Haliburton County Home Support Services is still playing a very active and much needed role in most of the communities in Haliburton County. In their annual report they say that they are endeavouring to provide services to persons in the County requiring meals and that they are working with HomeCare in the provision of Meals on Wheels to clients who have been assessed as requiring this service through HomeCare and Integrated Homemakers Program (IHP). Benefits under HomeCare are financed through OHIP.

Hugh Segal, one of Canada's foremost political commentators, will be the guest speaker at the Tory Dinner to be held at Wig-a-mog Inn this Friday evening June 9.

POINTS OF VIEW

Humane society a cat-astrophe

Clarke

SOMEONE ONCE SAID there are two kinds of people in the world — those who divide people into two groups, and those who don't. I do when it comes to dogs and cats. There are cat people, and there are dog people. Perversely, cats seem to like to cosy up to dog people — like me. Of course, there are many folk out there who are actually both.

Perhaps it is because they all had to start out their married lives in apartments, or it may be the choice of mates, but all five of my children have cats. Three of them also have dogs.

All this is a preamble to some thoughts on our feline friends, brought to mind by the fact that June has been decreed 'Adopt-a-Cat Month.' It's all sponsored by a cat food company, and their letter says they're doing it on behalf of Canada's Humane Societies.

Appropriately enough, the patron of this particular event is Morris, who was adopted from a shelter himself. The letter is from one Todd W. Winking and, with a name like that, I'm not sure if he's a cat or a people.

What is less appropriate is the fact that this production, which claims to be on behalf of Canada's Humane Societies, directs you to a Chicago address and phone number for more information. I didn't call...

If they had done any checking, they may have left the Toronto Humane Society off of their list. This bunch of bandits, have earned a high profile with such headline-grabbers as a board member smearing blood all over a Colonel Saunders Kentucky-fried chicken stand — on behalf of chickens everywhere — and sneaky appointments of friends to high-paying board positions...

Just last December, they were asking the courts to punish a 70-year-old woman they kept raiding because they claimed she didn't take care of the ones she had adopted from the street — not through their official channels, of course...

This compassionate outfit of fundraisers raided Doreen Ringham's home last June, and took her 54 cats, and had her charged. They took her cats to their shelter, then told her to take them away, billing her $4,300, for the costs of raiding her home!

Meanwhile, they had reprinted their gleeful stories of their raid, and send out a fundraising letter, begging for donations of $30,000 to help cover the costs of seizing her pets. When the case came to court in December, she had already paid some $20,000 to a private animal clinic for kennel bills, and Judge William Ross found her to be a "caring, compassionate, concerned parent to her cats," and declared her not guilty.

Showing their true colours, the Toronto Humane Society, told their high-priced lawyer to appeal the case. It may have been resolved while I was away this winter, or — knowing the state of our Provincial Court system — it may still be in the works somewhere, bedevilling the last days of this kindly woman's life.

Now, if you're like me, $20,000 in kennel fees seems like a tough way to part with your money. But cat lovers don't see it that way, I'm sure. If they've got it, they'll spend it on their pussycats. (I guess if I had it, I'd spend it on my pooch, too).

The Cat's Meow Hotel in Streetsville for instance, which caters to guests from as far away as Scarborough and Toronto, has rooms that cost as much as $20, a night. That, of course, includes 'an easy chair, a queen-size bed, catnip bar, nightlight, and a framed portrait of five kittens on the wall.'

In Calgary, Don Brooks has three animal motels that will take as many as 75 cats and dogs at one time, with 18 full-time attendants to care for their every need. And an animal is assured the same attendant for the length of his visit.

Rooms are from $5 to $9 a day there, but you pay extra for their romps, play sessions, and grooming. There is special entertainment for the cats, since their rooms overlook an aviary where the birds are kept.

And all the animals get piped-in music, to keep them company. I don't know what it says about the nature of cats and dogs — or their owners — but dogs like country music, and the cats prefer Mozart...

And the big trend in the Excited States these days is to insurance policies to cover costly veterinarian procedures. The Animal Health Insurance Agency of Danbury, Connecticut, says it's policy is like a 'major medical' plan, and it has sold hundreds of thousands of policies.

Their basic policy costs $89, U.S., and that covers pets from 3 months to 9 years for up to $1,000 per illness or injury, with a $40 deductible. There is no mortality provision if a pet dies.

I'm not aware of any similar plan here, but I don't expect anyone who is kind enough to adopt a cat they find running wild in the dumps around here to cough up that kind of dough for coverage. I hope some of you cat lovers up here will 'Adopt-a-cat' during this special month.

At least you don't live in Toronto, where you might want to buy a policy that would protect you from the weird and wonderful people who seem to have control of the local Humane Society.

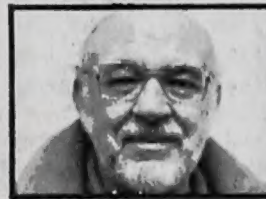

Pic of the Past

This week's Pic of the Past takes us back to the early 1900's and shows the members of council for the Municipality of Dysart et al, looking over the new cement bridge which had just been constructed over the Drag River at Haliburton. A few years ago the present bridge was erected in the same location next to the Drag River Municipal building. The building directly beyond the bridge was the home of the CNR foreman of the day. To the right of the photo is the building which is now known as the Village Barn. Some of the Senior Citizens were able to pick out Henry Brohm who is the gentleman fourth from the left. Oat bran won't cure boredom

AS OTHERS SEE IT

Bob Giuliano

DO YOU FIND yourself tired all the time? Unusually weary? Do you find that the zip has zapped and the enthusiasm you used to have has waned into a kind of droopy eyed half-slumber? Do you sigh a lot? Wonder what it's all about? Do you envy folks who seem to have boundless energy and sparkle in their living? Well, I have just got this syndrome figured out. Relax. I've got good news for you.

No, oat-bran does not help, neither does booze. (although, the first time I saw this syndrome was in a little church I was serving in the country. Everyone was sort of mellow and snoozy. I thought my sermons had put everyone to sleep. Then I began to notice, as I visited the folks in their homes, that everyone had a bottle of pink medicine on their window sill or shelf. When I asked about it, they reported that it was "Doc Lang's Remedy". Everyone had it. It took about two years before I could fine out what "Doc Lang's Tonic" was. It was phenobarb! That old country doctor had everyone sedated! After I got them off the tonic, I kind of wished I hadn't and could sympathize with Doc Lang, but in the long run, we got some work done around the place.) Anyway, I've got this weariness syndrome figured out again. This time it isn't the local Docs. You are, get ready for this, your are, if you are constantly tired, weary and heavy in the knees, you are being bored stupid! Yes, that's it. You aren't tired, you are victim of a boring environment. Not that it is uninteresting, or the things you are doing are not important, it is the constant artificial way everything is being done that finally exhausts you.

Look, I've been monitoring this for a couple of years now, looking for the phenobarb, you might say. When I come home tired from a day at the school or from meetings and I feel weary and tired, I make a note of it. When I come home uplifted, feeling good, smacking Betty on the back, I make a note of it. (so does she!) The scientific evidence is that everything we are doing is so managed and controlled by efficient systems of order that all the imagination, curiosity, spontaneity and courage is shut out tight.

I finally put it together coming along the 401 after an all day meeting that should have inspired me and set me to imaginative thinking. Instead, I was tired. Worrying about my hears, weight, bad habits, etc., etc. The meeting itself, was about important matters, but the way we proceeded (by 'procedure' of course,) was so mechanical, so little fun, so predictable, so finally boring, that I left early. "That's it!" I cried and rushed home to look at my carefully kept monitoring of moods. I am being bored stupid! Nothing of a surprising nature ever intrudes. There is no room for surprises when all we can talk about is 'bottom line'.

I know I can't convince you, so I will challenge you to monitor your own doings. Watch where and when the weariness sets in. (I know you're too busy and should cut back, but the truth is you are too busy at stuff that stinks, is no fun, does not make you thing other than in linear, systematic, reasonable ways.) So catch yourself getting tired. What's going on? There is nothing wrong with you. There is something wrong with what is happening around you. It has become coldly rational, numbers and procedures, steps one, two, three, etc. That stuff will kill you.

When you've come to see that you, a natural, feeling, potentially inspired and inspiring person are locked into an environment as artificial as a class room, you will wee that the instincts fall asleep, vitality and zest poop out.

I noticed it happening the other day when some faculty members were grinding their teeth about some very important matters. My eyes grew droopy, my body began to feel weary, and I made a mental note about getting to bed early that night. The I remembered my discovery, told the honoured professors that they were boring me to weariness, left and hunted down some folks who truly wrestle with life. At another meeting when several hundred folks were being inundated with critical material, I got up and made a motion that unimpassioned speeches be disallowed, only people out of control should be allowed to speak.

That motion was disallowed, of course, on the basis of Robert's Rules of Order having no such provision. So I made paper airplanes and flew them until someone spoke with some irritation.

In short, it is time to rise up and create a revolution of the human within us that is being smothered to the point of exhaustion. If you can't change an artificial process or give it some life, leave it. Its time to introduce the creative spirit again. It will give you energy you forgot you had.

Spring gives burst of energy

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia Muenzel

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, Sunday morning we saw two fair sized flocks of geese fly over. They were heading north, but in a zig-zag fashion, as though they couldn't decide amongst themselves, their exact destination. At that rate, they'll arrive just in time to start back.

I think we spent the whole weekend outdoors, on a marathon work binge. It's amazing how spring gives everyone these bursts of energy. We seem positively driven to get repairs and remodeling done and gardens planted. One morning we were out by 6:30, trying to finish up two of the six projects that we've started around here.

But I love this time of year. Once my muscles get used to the idea of stretching and bending, pushing and digging, the long days outside feel very fulfilling. We have this compulsion to walk around the premises at least once a day, admiring our accomplishments while we mentally compose another list of chores for tomorrow. For some reason, in spring, it doesn't seem to bother us that we never run out of lists.

I don't recall ever waking up thinking, "Aw, heck! There's nothin' to do." Nor do I remember a single day when every major project was completed to the last detail. We're like beavers who keep swimming around, checking the hutch. Always adding a twig here and there to re-inforce it.

The problem is in our minds. If we could just stop ourselves from dreaming up these nifty ideas for improving the looks, efficiency and space. And if we could, for heaven's sake, stop acquiring things we have to make space for.

It's like the thing with the chickens. Eight years ago we started out with twelve chick. And half of them died. They were those dumb, hybrid meat birds. I was so naive and upset, I put their bodies in little boxes and buried them. I even Cried. Some farmer!

We ditched the idea of meat birds, and got twelve silly crossbred chicks the next year. And adopted someone's year old hens. We changed breeds, got twenty-five and spent a winter trying to convince them to eat feed and not each other. That was a really gross year. We chased chickens around the coop, tarring their little naked bums until the coop smelled like an auto-body shop.

Then there was the ordeal of the rose coloured glasses. I won't even explain it. Nobody believed us at the time. People actually stopped into have first hand proof that we had put these teeny little pince-nez blinders on a bunch of stupid chickens to prevent cannibalism.

After that fiasco, we finally smartened up and got a mess of good of Rhode Island Reds. We even learned that it was cheaper to buy them twelve weeks old. No muss, no fuss. They eat feed. They lay nice brown eggs. They make good soup.

In the meantime, we've expanded to two coops and a holding pen, plus three enlarged outdoor runs. We've battled mice twice, and learned that the only safe battle for feed is an old freezer. (Even five raccoons can't open a freezer lid, while standing on it.) We have, between us, devised, invented, and designed a gadget for every problem that arises. Except one. We have yet to find a way to convince certain persons, (I won't mention any names), that no matter how nice we are to our hens, they'll only lay one egg a day.

Pungent revenge

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon

HE HAD COME from a long line of teasers and practical jokers. Growing up in that large boisterous family, Sam had had to learn to dish it out as well as take it to survive. His sister was one of the toughest kids in grade school. No one, and I mean no one, ever bullied her. Not because of her big brothers but because she had learned from them how to take care of herself. She could throw a punch with the best of them and if backed into a corner verbally, her acid tongue was legendary.

On the other hand, Sam had a quieter nature. He didn't relish a good argument or painfully funny joke the way his siblings did. But he was quick-witted and could handle himself well when the need arose. As the years passed, many things in and around his life changed. The one truly consistent ingredient was the closeness of his family and their crazy sense of humour.

To this day, try as he might, he can't remember what he had done that weekend. It had been late spring and he was at the cottage with his wife and children. His brother had his own cottage on the next property over and he was up as well that weekend. The black flies had been terrible, that much he remembered. He and his brother were trying to build a deck overlooking the lake. But even with the net-

THE FIRST THING I WANTED to do was cry. A girlish reaction, I'll admit, but it seemed appropriate at the time. The hose leading from the lake to the water pump under my house was disconnected and there was no running water.

I pictured myself being forced to wake up extra early in the morning to run up and down the stairs with buckets full of water to heat up on the stove for bathing until my father came the next weekend to fix it.

It seems that I've had very little luck when it comes to running water since moving to the cottage. My first week, I only had hot running water in the tub because there wasn't enough time for my father to connect both after installing the water boiler. I would have to fill the tub halfway the night before a bath, allow the water to cool, then add more hot water the next morning.

When my father came up to fix the plumbing the next weekend, he discovered the faucet needed a washer, but it was Sunday and all the stores were closed. So I wouldn't have hot water dripping in the tub all day, I had to keep the water shut unless I wanted a shower, when I would crawl under the house to turn the taps. At least my water ran hot and cold.

My father didn't even attempt to ask me to go to the hardware store, buy a washer and fix the faucet. He must have known it was beyond my scope. A few weeks later my brother came up to visit and he fixed everything in a few seconds.

Even though I could never actually fix the water myself, I had proven that roughing it wasn't so tough. I could live with no hot water. I could manage

Haliburton soccer club has a taste of defeat in Orillia

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The Haliburton senior soccer team echoed a junior team loss against the Bracebridge Centennials when they suffered a disappointing 4-3 loss against the Midland Northstars in Orillia on Sunday.

"It was a hard loss for us," said Brian Moore, the manager of the team. "We played better on Sunday than we have been playing recently."

The signs of defeat were apparent when Midland sprang to a 2-0 lead in the first 17 minutes of the game. Jim Mitakidis scored on a corner kick in the seventh minute of play, and Dave Campbell gave Midland their second goal on a give and go through ball.

However, Haliburton would not give up. Dave Bush scored on a penalty kick 21 minutes into the game, and Ivor Thompson scored on tie-tac-toe passing from Hans Walter and Joe Mancuso, bringing the game to a two all tie at the end of the first half.

"We had the brilliance when we needed it," said

Moore. "We just couldn't sustain it."

Haliburton's defense was tight at the start of the second half. Midland attempted an offside trap, but Haliburton read the trap and managed to avoid it. Thompson chipped the ball over the defence, and Mancuso headed the ball over the goalie's head, giving Haliburton their only lead of the game.

Sweeper Dave Bush was taken out of the game just over the hour mark, with what is believed to be a hyper-extended knee. Bush brought the total number of players on the injury list to three in the last two weeks.

With no spares to fill in for the missing player, Haliburton had to complete the last 25 minutes of the game short-handed.

"When Dave went down it deflated us," said Moore. "We started concentrating on maintaining our lead, not playing the game."

The game was tied up when Ted Chisolm of Midland chipped the ball past the Haliburton goalie. At the 80 minute mark, Campbell scored his second

Born in JUNE?

BIRTHSTONE:
PEARL

FLOWER:
ROSE

Who comes with summer to this earth
And owes to June her day of birth
With ring of Pearl upon her hand
Can health, wealth and happiness command.

For centuries, the pearl has been a mark of distinction, wealth and power. Pearls were treasured in China as early as 3000 B.C. and they are mentioned in the Talmud and the Bible. The pearl is the only gem that nature creates in the sea. Ranging in color from delicate rose white to black, all pearls are formed within the bodies of a few varieties of shellfish. Pearls symbolize health, vitality, truth and beauty. They are found principally in the Persian Gulf, Australia, the South Seas, Panama and Venezuela.

Hockey banquet honours young athletes

Players, parents celebrate wins

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Players in the Minor Hockey Association were honoured last week at the annual Haliburton Huskies banquet.

The dinner, held at the Royal Canadian Legion in Haliburton, attracted a crowd of more than 100 people. Players and their parents joined together to congratulate the athletes that excelled during the season.

Each of the nine teams that make up the association had an exceptional year of play, and each team was introduced following a roast beef dinner.

The first team to take the stage was the Tykes O.M.H.A. The boys played in exhibition games throughout the winter, and remained undefeated against Minden. They lost their first two games against Bracebridge, but went on to win the next three. They also won the Glen Dart tournament.

The members on the team are: Michael Craigen; Jamie Johnston; Brian Mulholland; Justin Winder; Adam Wilson; Jeff Wilson; Ryan Defabrizio; Shane Campbell; Ryan Wood; Bobby Fletcher; Logan Roberts; Scott Curry; Andrew Brown; Bobby Hebert; Ian Bailey; Chris Petrow; Jeremy Mieskie; Jamie Doan; and Kyle Robinson. The coaches of the team were Brian Mulholland and Chris Mawby.

The Novice Tri County team were runners up in their league. They made it to the last game before being defeated by Minden by a narrow margin.

The players on the Novice Tri County team are: Kevin Harrison; Danny Jordan; Drew Robertson; Andrew Baker; Devon Dart; Tobin Fitzgerald; Mike Morissette; Andrew Burtch; Ryan O'Neill; Andrew Postlethwaite; John McMahon; Ian Clements; Matthew Billings; Jason Henry; and Greg Forgrave. The coaches of the team were Gary Burtch and Roger Dart.

Winning their division was the Novice O.M.H.A. team. They were also finalists in the eastern zone, and the south central zone. The team played approximately 55 games, 36 of which they won.

The athletes are: Andrew Madill; Sean Irvine; Billy Dovel; Jonathon Consack; Luke Cowen; Aaron Galbraith; Brett Wilson; Blaze Foster; Greg Schell; Joshua Dennis; Matthew Burk; and Joshua Burk. Jim Burk coached the team, along with Manager, Bill Irvine, and Trainer, Rod Consack.

The Atom Tri County team made it into the playoffs before being eliminated by Woodville. Baseball just one of many sports for warriors' pitcher

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

For Tran LaRue, one of the pitchers for the Haliburton Warriors, baseball is just another sport on a long list that he happens to be good at.

Despite the fact that he has been playing organized ball for over ten years, the 21-year-old athlete also plays golf, badminton, tennis, and squash, and he says hockey is what he really prefers to play. "Hockey is more demanding," he says. "There is more action and more contact. But anything to do with sports I'm game for. I love to play."

And his years of hockey playing have paid off. LaRue will be going to Georgian College next year to take automotive marketing on a hockey scholarship. The college will be paying his tuition, and board.

"Georgian was recruiting this year," says LaRue. "The are hosting the Canadian championships next year, and the host team is automatically in it."

Last year, he played Junior A hockey for Rayside Balfour, near Sudbury, when he was taking commerce at Laurentian University. He has also played Junior B for Peterborough.

However, when the ice has melted LaRue turns his talent towards the ball field, as much for the social aspect of the sport, as for the challenges it poses. Even though the two game schedule and one night a week practice cut into the team's spare time every aspect of the play is enjoyable.

"It's a chance to get the guys together and have some fun," he says. "Sort of a boy's night out."

One game a week is played out of town, and LaRue says the travelling is a great part of the game. Northern Transit gives them a small bus to take to their away games.

"Everyone gets together on the bus and tells a few stories," says LaRue. "And it really isn't that far. The furthest away that we play is Bobcaygeon."

In addition to their regular season play, the team also participates in tournaments, where they're usually guaranteed at least two games. This year Halibur-

Haliburton Warriors start strong but finish weak

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton Warriors started off the week with a win in Bobcaygeon on Monday night, but couldn't hold it together for their game against Fenelon Falls on Tuesday.

Haliburton jumped to a strong lead in the first inning of the Bobcaygeon game. Mike MacNaull, David McColl, and Erin Nicholls all came home, and the Haliburton team followed up with a three-up, three-down defense.

Bobcaygeon turned the tables in the second inning, bringing in two runs, and shutting down the Warrior offence. The teams matched each other play for play for the rest of the game, with both teams bringing in one run in the third and two in the fifth—including a homerun by Haliburton's Andrew Burk.

In the final inning the Warriors increased their narrow lead when Tran LaRue came home in the top of the 7th, bringing the final score to 7-5.

However, the team couldn't keep up their winning pace. Although they played a strong defensive game, with the exception of one inning they had a hard time bringing home the runs. Fenelon Falls won the game 7-4.

The visiting team started off the play with a home run by the pitcher. Haliburton failed to get a runner on base with their first turn at bat, and the score remained 1-0 at the end of the first inning.

In the top of the second, Haliburton pitcher, Tran LaRue struck out the first batter. The second runner had a base hit, and stole to third after a bunt. A fumble in centre field allowed him to come home. The final out for the Fenelon team came when Barry Boice caught the fly in left field.

Haliburton couldn't seem to get on base in the second inning. Erin Nicholls led the team off by striking out. Andrew Burk hit to the pitcher, who fumbled the ball, giving Burk enough time to make it to first. John Ballantyne was out at first on a throw from third base, and Burk advanced to second. David McColl was thrown out at first, bringing the inning to a 2-0 close.

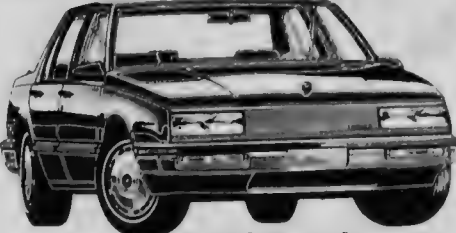

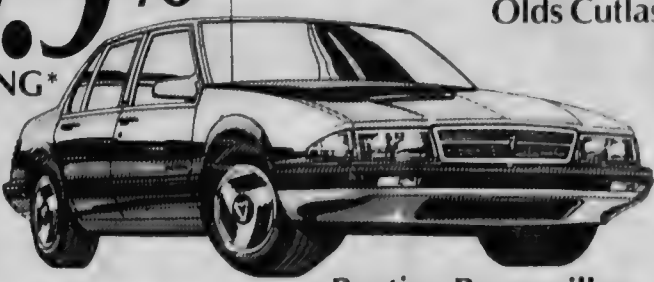

Fenelon Falls played an aggressive third inning, taking every opportunity to steal bases. The lineup started off with a one base hit, with the runner stealing second on the next at bat. The next batter up took first, and brought in the runner on second. Another runner came home before Haliburton made a double play to end the turn at bat. Andrew Burk caught a pop fly and threw to third base to tag the runner who was leading off.

Rob Craigen, the first batter for the Warriors, was caught out by Fenelon's second baseman, Ron Yake, and Barry Boice were both thrown out at first, leaving Fenelon Falls ahead 4-0.

Once again Fenelon Falls took advantage of every

Hockey executive elected

Peter Van Leeuwen.

The final team to take the stage and receive their recognition was the Midget O.M.H.A. team. The team made it to the quarter finals and lost against Sterling—the team that eventually went on to win the All-Ontario championship.

New executive

Minor hockey has chosen its executive for the coming season, and predictably, those who agreed to serve have been involved with the local hockey scene in various ways in recent years.

New president is Sherri Morrison. Brian Foster is vice president. Secretary is Wanda Byers, with Chantal Morrison as treasurer, Tom Russell as equipment manager, and Len Salvatori as OMHA contact person. Claude Parish will continue to act as referee in chief, while Brian Foster will handle fund raising duties.

ton will be hosting a tournament, as well as playing in tournaments in Harcourt and Minden.

Most of the players on the team have known each other for a number of years, and there are few new faces each spring. Knowing each other, and having played ball together for so long, enables the team to fare well against some stiff competition.

Last year the Warriors placed second in the league (they lost to Minden in the finals), and although some teams have dropped out of the league this year the wins don't appear to be getting any easier.

"The competition is pretty good this year," says LaRue. "There are less teams, but the main ones are still in."

When LaRue isn't on the mound, he plays third base, but he says he would play just about any position, with the exception of catcher. "I would rather throw than catch," he says.

Whether he is pitching or playing third base, LaRue is always aggressive, and he says he plays the way the rest of the team does.

"We have a pretty aggressive team," he says. "You have to be aggressive to win. Everyone comes to play."

LaRue became involved in baseball when he was a child because of his father, who is now one of the coaches of the Warriors.

"My dad played ball all his life, and he encouraged me to play," says LaRue. "And this is a real ball town. People like to come out and watch and get involved."

West Guilford batter Rita Barry gets ready for the pitch. The West Guilford ladies swung their way to a 14-9 win over the Haliburton ladies. It is their second win of the season.

Guilford wins two straight

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The West Guilford ladies softball team made it two wins in a row at the start of the season with a 14-9 win over the Haliburton ladies team.

Right from the beginning West Guilford commanded the game. By the end of the first inning the ladies had jumped to a 6-1 lead over their opponents. Brenda Lavender hit a home run for West Guilford and JoAnne Pearson brought home the only run for Haliburton in the top of the first.

However, the momentum of the team slowed in the mid innings. Cheryl Cooper came home during the second inning, but no one crossed home plate in the third or fourth.

Haliburton started a comeback effort in the top of the fourth, bringing in five runners and narrowing West Guilford's lead to 7-6. But they were unable to close the gap in the fifth.

West Guilford fought back and scored another five runs in the bottom of the fifth. They outdistanced Haliburton by one run in the sixth, scoring another two runs. At the bottom of the sixth West Guilford was leading 14-7.

In near darkness, Pearson and Kelly Newlands scored for Haliburton before their three outs ended the game. The final score was 14-9 for West Guilford.

Other scores throughout the league:

West Guilford beat the Rockliffe team 6-4, and Minden trounced Haliburton 17-1 on May 26. The Rockliffe team defeated Minden on June 1, with high scores of 30 to 20, with Darlene Pettes hitting a homerun for the Rockliffe.

opportunity to play aggressive ball, and unnerve the Haliburton team. The first batter was thrown out at first, but the second stole both second and third before coming home after a fumble at centre field.

Tran LaRue was replaced on the mound by Ron Yake. The third batter stole second and third on wild pitches, and came home on a base hit. The second out was thrown on a forced play to second by Yake. The third batter was called out after he stepped on the ball he had grounded up the first base line.

At the bottom of the fourth the score was 6-0, but Haliburton wasn't ready to make their move yet. Mike MacNaull made it to first on a ball that dropped down in centre field, but LaRue struck out, followed by Nicholls and Burk being caught out on fly balls.

The first batter in the fifth was caught out by Boice in left field. The next two runners singled to first, before Yake walked the fourth batter, giving Fenelon Falls a bases loaded situation. On the next hit, the runner on first was tagged on his way to second, and the runner on third came home. The final out came on a throw to first from Yake.

Trailing 7-0 at the bottom of the fifth, Haliburton started their turn at bat with Ballantyne walking to first. McColl struck out, and Craigen and Yake were both caught out, leaving Ballantyne on first.

However, the Warriors started to come alive in the sixth. The first Fenelon batter was caught out by Ballantyne on first. The next two batters were caught out in left field and at third base.

At the bottom of the sixth, Boice was thrown out at first, but MacNaull took the base after being hit by the ball on the pitch. Phillip Smith singled to first, with MacNaull advancing to second. Nicholls then notched a two base hit, bringing MacNaull home, and sending Smith to third.

Andrew Burk repeated his Monday night performance by smashing the ball out of the park, bringing home three runs.

Ballantyne took first and stole second before McColl was thrown out at first. McCallum was then caught out by the first baseman, and the inning closed with a 7-4 comeback.

Erin Nicholls took over on the mound for the last inning. The first batter was thrown out a first by Nicholls. The next batter walked to first, but his time on base was short-lived when the next player was thrown out at first. The third out came on a catch by Burk.

With the gap narrowing, Haliburton couldn't pull the game out of the bag. Yake banded a single that eluded the short stop and third baseman. Boice then singled but Yake was thrown out on a forced play at second. MacNaull connected for a base hit to advance Boice, but Smith then struck out and Nicholls was thrown out at first, leaving Boice and MacNaull stranded.

The Warriors needed a few more innings, but time ran out, and the team lost the game 7-4.

Violence will always be an issue in society

them to other services. It's not difficult for them to talk once they know what they say is confidential.

"On your part, if someone tells you something, you don't let your thoughts interfere. You're all ears and don't interrupt if it's not necessary. You also try to give her some feedback."

Gerrard finds many similarities between the women she's meeting now and the women she met at Vancouver's rape centre because "a lot of rapes are domestic ones—the rapist is the woman's partner or close friend." Wife assault often includes some sexual aspect as well.

"It's a matter of control and power," King says, adding that she does not agree with the new term spousal abuse, to make other men feel better about the subject. "Ninety-five per cent of domestic assaults are against women. It really negates what's happening by trying to be non-sexist. But it does involve the sexes and power control."

This should be remembered when talking about the issue of the growing amount of violence in general in our society. "The whole issue of wife assault has been and will continue to be. The violence in our society may be increasing but I know wife assault has occurred and will occur until there is some intervention."

Intervention is much easier now that women are beginning to get the courts and police on their side, King says. Now that the onus is on the police to lay charges if violence has occurred, just as they would if there was a fight in a bar, "it takes a lot of the pressure off women and puts the responsibility where it should be. It's up to the courts."

Previously, women were often blamed for the violence. They nagged their husbands or weren't supportive enough. This doesn't wash any more because violence is violence, whoever it's perpetrated against.

For the victims, they often had reached the point where she admits "I did everything I could and this is not working out."

Gerrard says that a large part of counselling is convincing the woman "she is a valuable member of the human race."

One of the advantages of having a case go to court is what's called a "victim impact statement." The woman gets to say what she believes part of the sentence should be and invariably, that means being ordered to visit one of the men's groups.

King points to the recent celebrated trial in New York City to show that you can categorize neither the victims nor violators. The man, a lawyer, was found guilty of murdering his six-year-old step daughter. The mother, who was also university educated, had been assaulted for so many years by this man, she no longer had the self-esteem to protect herself and her daughter. The young girl was beaten, they thought she was just unconscious, and they left her dying on the floor while they went for dinner.

"That's the scariest thing—it could happen to each one of us unless we are aware of the dynamics of wife assault. We're sometimes blocked from seeing what's happening in a relationship."

Which is why King likes to work with young women, many of whom are contacting her because they've chosen to do family violence for an assignment. "There's a lot to be said about role stereotyping and how teenagers treat each other," says King. The teenager who goes out on a date and is pressured by the boy needs to know she has the right to follow what she feels is best. "It's a prime time to deal with them."

Traditionally women have placed their needs after their family or mate's. "They're not used to thinking about themselves and feel they have to fix it and take care of (whatever's) troubling the others." If the marriage wasn't working out, it was their responsibility to accommodate the husband's peculiarities—like responding to problems with his fist. Often, his problems didn't even stem from what was happening in the home, and frustrations and lack of confidence would be taken out on his easiest victim, his wife.

"Some people believe we're breaking up families but families are already broken up before we arrive," says King. Counselling does not include telling the women to leave her husband because that's a decision she would have to make on her own. But it does include showing women there are alternatives to assuming responsibility. "We do empower women to make their own choices."

What helps in this process is the support group meetings. "It's amazing what comes out of those groups," says Gerrard. "They really help each other to discover their strengths and wonderful qualities."

The two women acknowledge there's a lot of discovery which still needs to take place. "We are working towards changing some attitudes but it's a long process," says King. "We haven't in any way reached a point where we can feel successful in ending the violence."

If anyone would like to talk to King or Gerrard, they can do so by phoning 457-3355. A toll-free crisis line is also available: 1-800-461-7656.

Soccer team loses to Midland

goal for Midland on a direct kick from 20 yards, which Moore says "just shut us down". The final score was 4-3 for Midland.

The junior team matched the Bracebridge team goal for goal until the last minutes of the game. Bracebridge started out in the lead at the beginning of the game, but Haliburton's Jan Haedicke scored on a penalty kick to even up the score at 1-1.

Cecil Smith followed up on a ball chipped into the goal area, and took Haliburton into the lead 2-0, however, Bracebridge came back to lead the game before the end of the first half.

Darin Parish tied the score at 3-3 late in the game, but Coach Walter Tose said the team "wasn't as well organized as we should have been. The other team capitalized on this and got the clincher".

Haliburton had only ten minutes to try and tie the game up after the final Bracebridge goal, and were unable to make the play. The final score was 4-3 for Bracebridge.

The Bracebridge team were league champions for several years, but Tose says the juniors could have done better against them.

"Bracebridge is not as strong a team as they once were, but they are still strong. We didn't play badly but they (the players) know and I know that we can play better," he said. "We didn't take advantage of our legs like we could have to outrun them and tire them out. But if you are going to make them run you have to be able to control the ball."

The next game will be tonight (Wednesday) at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden. The Haliburton Juniors will take on the Haliburton Seniors at 6:30 p.m. The game on Sunday, June 10 has been moved to Wednesday, June 14, at 6:45 p.m. at Archie Stouffer.

Industrial zoning strictly temporary says Moore

he was in a quandary, "not in permitting (the business), but in rezoning. Are we opening the floodgates here?" MacLeod went on to say he would hate for Blairhampton Road to turn into something similar to "that monstrosity outside of Haliburton they call Industrial Park Road...Is it possible that you can accommodate both of us?" he asked council.

Reeve Ray Moore explained that the rezoning would be a "temporary measure," and that council "would like this to happen" for Vandenberg. "If he were going for a per-time comes. He said the building seemed too large for Vandenberg's personal use.

Berry pointed out that Vandenberg's business is beneficial to Minden, and provides more people with jobs.

"Oh, I applaud Gerry for starting a business in our area," Woods agreed, but added that a temporary rezoning was a "wrong turn at this juncture...We are concerned. I'm sure you have all good intentions. I have learned the next council isn't necessarily obligated to follow" any decisions made now. "It's an open door."

saying, "If Gerry spent a lot of money, wouldn't this give some weight to him continuing? It's quite a big step." Cairns also said just because Vandenberg approached council, that doesn't necessarily make him a gentleman. "He had to come."

Vandenberg said many people run businesses from their homes without proper zoning or approval. "There's very few homes here that don't have a cottage industry."

He also answered to Woods' concerns over the roads saying that he brings in all materials used for his business from Peterborough, and that it currently amounts to a half ton truck each day. "I think the increase would be quite insignificant relative to the kind of abuse that's going on now" with the road. Councillor Mike Maher pointed out to Woods that "the traffic problem isn't specifically caused by the business."

In an interview after the meeting, Woods said some of his fears were alleviated during discussion of the matter. "However, I still believe that the passing of this bylaw has set a precedent for future application on the Blairhampton Road. I'm also concerned that the road is not up to the increased traffic. We're having a hard enough time of it now."

"While I appreciate Gerry for his efforts to start a business here, I feel it would have been better suited for him to start the business in the industrial park."

Woods said he will not consider filing an objection with the Ontario Municipal Board. "There's no point. In my view, the OMB would not overturn council."

MacLeod said he thought council handled his concerns "quite nicely. We're feeling a lot better about it. It's a nice road, and nobody wants to see it change."

MacLeod's wife Claire does crafts from their home, so he said he can sympathize with Vandenberg. "He's been operating now for years and it hasn't caused any problems."

Cairns also said he feels "a little bit easier about it. I feel better if the residents who live here feel better about it. It really depends on the people who live here."

He added that the meeting was beneficial to "get people thinking" about the matter. "Thinking and discussing is what you have to do to keep things clear. I feel a bit happier about it now. It's just the precedent setting which upsets people."

Vandenberg told The Echo he started Applied Stress Technology three years ago "mainly on an experimental basis until we found out, yes, we're on the right track and yes there's a demand for our product. Now we're too small for what we are doing." Vandenberg said he needs to bring in more sophisticated equipment. He also said he is glad he won't be forced to leave Minden.

"If he were going for a permanent rezoning there would be all kinds of objections from this council."

manent rezoning there would be all kinds of objections from this council. (We are) only attempting to accommodate Mr. Vandenberg at this point."

"I can assure you I would never be content with having an industrial rezoning," Deputy Reeve Bern Berry told MacLeod, who was then assured that if Vandenberg was granted the temporary rezoning, and wanted a renewal after the three years were up, another public meeting with council would be required. MacLeod, however, would not withdraw his objection to the rezoning until he heard what other objectors had to say.

Resident Tim Woods said he lives "kitty corner" to Vandenberg's property. He told council part of his fears lie in the fact that Vandenberg could make three applications up to a total of nine years for the temporary industrial rezoning.

"Is it not logical that the council is setting a precedent by allowing this?" asked Woods. Moore said no, that council has allowed temporary rezonings before and cited as an example the old IGA building which is being used to house kindergarten and Grade 1 students of Archie Stouffer Public School.

Woods went on to say that Blairhampton Road is in poor shape and difficult to maintain. "We're talking about another six potential vehicles," on the road each day. He said if a temporary rezoning were allowed, residents should be given some compensation in terms of road improvement since more vehicles would cause further deterioration but added, "I'm not going to hold a gun to your head to improve it tomorrow."

He also expressed concern that Vandenberg would be spending money on an expensive building which should only be used on a temporary basis, and might have second thoughts about moving when the

Moore said he didn't think Woods had to worry because, "when even the township has to rezone a property, the people have a right to object." He said if anyone had any strong objections, they could be heard at an OMB meeting.

Brad Bradamore, who is also the township's chief building official and bylaw enforcement officer, stressed that Minden would like to allow the rezoning for Vandenberg "so we can keep him in our area until we do get an industrial park. I don't believe we are setting a precedent."

He went on to say that Vandenberg is "quite aware of all the pitfalls" of spending money on a temporary building, and added that buildings of similar size and cost are common. "Lately I've seen farm buildings that size. All Gerry's building is going to be is a farm when he moves out."

Bob Cairns doesn't live on Blairhampton Road, but owns a piece of property next door to Vandenberg. "I'm very concerned about the precedent that might be set here," Cairns told council. "There's no guarantee here" that the rezoning won't become permanent in the future.

"It scares me," Cairns said about his worries over the land he might wish to sell in future years. "I think this is wrong. You people want to keep (the business) in Minden. I understand it's an ideal industry because it's clean and quiet...I think if something could be done to let Gerry continue with expansion and not change the zoning it would be fine."

Moore said Vandenberg should be applauded for coming to council with the matter. "He came to this township on a voluntary basis. We've got to call him a gentleman because he asked if he could have the zoning properly."

Cairns echoed Woods' concerns

Cristal Perrin, best attendance; Jeremy McDuff, most improved dress; and Dawn Rowan, most improved cadet. Absent was Kent Miller, best male cadet.

Local cadets end year with a bang

by MABEL BRANNIGAN

Parents, friends and Legion members along with the Haliburton Legion Pipe Band attended the graduation of 38 cadets on Sunday. The remarkable improvement in their training over the last year was very noticeable, and Commanding Officers Wood, Allaire, and instructors are to be complimented for the skills which have been learned by these young people in the past year. The reviewing officer, Acting Staff Sgt., Steve Adam, of the O.P.P., was the guest speaker. He praised the accomplishments of the cadets and noted that these are the boys and girls of the area who are among those rarely in conflict with the law. Distinguished guests were Lieut. Colonel Beddick, Lieut. Colonel Kernohan, and Honorary Colonel of the Hasty P's, Colonel Wilcox. After the awards and ceremonies in the curling rink, everyone was invited back to the Legion for a reception prepared by the parents and cadets. Comrade Wood thanked the parents for their support, the Legion, and all background workers, especially Legion manager, Comrade Jim Tice.

Woman primed for plumbing

without cold, but no water at all? This was too much. I decided to take action.

Remembering the many hours my father would work to connect the pump each summer (not to mention all the cursing), I spent little time wishing I had paid more attention and decided to do my best to prime the pump and get the water running again.

After trying to get the hose connected I felt dejected again. My hands weren't strong enough to force the two ends together. Head hung low, I went upstairs to phone my mother who reminded me that my father, who was away that weekend, always used a blow torch to make the ends more pliable. She also tried to convince me to ask a neighbour for help. "Just ask," she urged, "don't be shy."

But I wanted to prove a point, to show I could do the job myself. Fixing the pump would show that I'm not as helpless as I thought. Surely the job couldn't be that difficult. Besides, wouldn't my neighbours hate me if I bugged them on a Sunday morning?

I started to get ready for the job, boiling water and gathering tools and buckets. Of course, I couldn't find a screwdriver. My father is a carpenter, so you'd think there would be hundreds lying around the house. Ending up using a butter knife, I managed to find a few wrenches at last.

Pouring boiling water over the pipes (not wanting to attempt a blowtorch), I managed to soften the hard plastic enough to get the line connected. Using the butter knife to tighten the clamps, I swatted at blood hungry mosquitoes which swarmed my head.

Under the house I used to same hot water trick to disconnect the pipe at the mouth of the pump to pour buckets full of water to fill the line. The butter knife was getting a bit worn by that point, but I felt like I really knew what I was doing.

The pump was primed, the knife was shot and I was ready to test my handiwork. I turned on the pump and checked the taps. Nothing.

Upset again, I phoned my mother who told me to unscrew a bolt at the top of the pump to fill it right to the top with water. After following these instructions, I tried the water again.

I held my breath as wet air sputtered out of the faucet in the kitchen, and then gave a resounding cheer when water began to flow out. At times like those you can't help but think of Helen Reddy singing, "I am strong, I am invincible, I am woman!"

Until I tried the hot water tap. Something went wrong, and I still haven't figured out what, but I no longer had hot running water. It was back to square one. But I remembered one thing—I'd turned off most of the power breakers that morning to avoid damaging the elements in the boiler in case the water had emptied. Whooping with joy I switched the electricity on and waited until the end of the day when I would lay back in a much-deserved bath.

It didn't work. The water isn't heating. Although I feel proud of how I primed the pump just like my father would have (including all the cursing), I still really miss the luxury of hot running water. I'll just have to warm my tears up on the stove until my father returns this weekend to help.

Township of Harvey requires a
ROAD SUPERINTENDENT

The Township of Harvey, a rapidly growing suburban, tourist oriented municipality located 20 miles north of the city of Peterborough in the heart of the Kawartha Lakes tourist region, requires an energetic person to effectively manage the overall operations of the Road Department.

The Road Superintendent will be responsible to Council through the C.A.O. for: Road budget preparation and budget control; recommending road department staff and equipment requirements; preparation of tenders and other related documents and reports; operation and maintenance of standard road equipment; planning and supervision of road construction projects to M.T.O. standards; planning and maintenance of a traffic sign programme to M.T.O. and H.T.A. standards; such other duties normally associated with the operation of a Municipal Roads Department.

The successful candidate must demonstrate the ability to effectively communicate both orally and in writing with Council, the public, the Township's technical advisors and representatives of Provincial Government agencies.

The remuneration will be commensurate with qualifications and experience. A generous fringe benefit package is provided.

Sealed applications plainly marked "Application for Road Superintendent", containing a confidential resume of experience, education and other relevant information, will be received by the undersigned until 4:30 p.m. June 30, 1989.

High technology broadens school curriculum of place. They don't really belong to where they go to school, and they don't belong in their community. That can have many negative sociological affects, and may be one reason why young kids are leaving the small communities."

This advanced teaching method could help to stop the "decay of rural communities" where small schools are closed in order to provide cost-efficient education by busing students to large, centralized schools.

Although delegates from Australia, Great Britain and the United States attended the conference, de Grosbois was most impressed with the way provinces such as Alberta, British Columbia and Manitoba have been developing programs to deliver curriculum to distance learners.

Students either study in their local school or at home using course material in the form of video tapes, computer programs and printed text. "Curricula is set in a multi-media package. The student would either use the program on his own or under a local teacher. The student could communicate with a distance teacher or to other students for instructional help, as well as to submit assignments, through a FAX machine or computer modem."

De Grosbois says Ontario's Ministry of Education is currently experimenting with this advanced form of teaching in some rural northern schools in areas such as Sudbury and Thunder Bay with the Contact North pilot program. But "Alberta, B.C. and Manitoba's programs are out of the pilot stage and are in operation and expanding from year to year. They all have distance learning programs in operation where schools can communicate through a network."

The program would be beneficial in providing students in small schools with a wider variety of subjects. "They can deliver solid educational programs to remote rural areas. If a student wants to learn advanced biology, they have things on video that a teacher couldn't present in the classroom. They can actually show a human heart pumping, or laser surgery at a level better than what a teacher would be able to manage."

In a presentation demonstrating the affects of such programs, de Grosbois saw some young students who learned how to multiply six digit numbers from a computer game. "It was probably a learned response, but it shows that you can learn your multiplication tables in an interesting way."

Although these learning programs are very advanced and quite expensive, our schools aren't too far removed from "high-tech teaching."

"In Haliburton County there are students learning to spell from some computer programs, and learning geography from others. Developing these advanced programs is expensive, and the equipment is expensive. But we have already acquired a lot of the technology that would be needed."

De Grosbois suggests that the county take a look at these new innovations, but says it's too early for a small school board to start experimenting with the programs.

"I was very encouraged by these new ideas. And Haliburton County is definitely a rural board. We don't have any large urban centres, all our schools serve communities of 10,000 or less people and most of our students are bused to school. The length of time children spend on our buses has certainly become a big issue and these new ideas are offering ways of alleviating this problem."

"It's a very progressive board in terms of promoting computers and innovative ways of education, and it's exciting that these kinds of ideas are appearing on the horizon. It would be simple and inexpensive to alter the present computers to suite these programs. Most schools already have FAX machines. We already have the technology."

Still, the county's board is too small to consider developing its own programs, where some courses are estimated at a cost of $50,000, says de Grosbois. "It's a new idea, and there's a lack of developed curricula. At the conference there was a lot of discussion toward sharing the cost of developing the curricula between several school boards and the ministry."

There was also talk of starting a Canadian Association for Rural Education to lobby governments for help in improving the delivery of education to remote areas and small schools, says de Grosbois. Then programs could be shared across the country.

As an example of how such ideas could be used in the county if they become more common, de Grosbois says one classroom in the Dorset school could be set up as a distance learning centre with a VCR and computer. "Rather than being bused to the nearest school for whatever grade, a student could get all his learning through a multi-media package. This makes communities more viable. They will be able to keep their small schools which will become more useful."

About 90 per cent of busing costs is paid for by the provincial government. Municipalities are now being faced with severe cuts in provincial grants, and "it may end up that we'll have to pay more for busing costs."

Busing is very expensive, so it may come to a situation where we have to consider an alternative like this."

"We're certainly not at the point where we would make a proposal, but we would start with things not offered in Haliburton County for a full selection of subjects. Even a student right in Haliburton village could take his studies from home."

De Grosbois says he was particularly encouraged to hear there has been no evidence that students in Alberta taking a distance learning course were behind those in regular school classes. "In most cases they were even a little bit ahead. It's much too early to tell, but there has been no evidence of a deterioration in course quality and student performance. At this stage, though, I would take that information with a grain of salt."

Still, de Grosbois was quite impressed with the conference and discussions on problems with small schools and rural education. Some might not expect such "high-tech" advancements in rural school boards.

"I knew the topic, but I wasn't expecting to see so many viable solutions. It was a really nice blend between modern education and modern technology."

A fishy plan for revenge

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon Lynch

ting around their heads, the little black demons drove them indoors over and over again. Finally they had given up, vowing that next weekend they would try to finish the job, hoping the bugs would be less hungry.

Maybe it had been connected to the black flies or the nets. Sam just couldn't remember. But he had plotted and carried out a truly masterful joke on his brother. It had caught him off guard and he had fallen for it hook line and sinker. When he realized that he had been taken by his brother, he vowed revenge. "You'll never get me back," Sam bragged, flushed with success. "I'll be on my guard."

"Oh Sam you're such a sucker. Sometime soon, when you least expect it, I'll get you!" came his brother's reply.

Sam had been careful and observant the rest of that day and most of Sunday. But when nothing happened, he put the whole thing out of his head and packed the car for the return trip to Toronto. Ah, someday when he could swing it, he would live near Haliburton every day of the week, not just weekends. But in the meantime he had to put up with this weekly trip. His wife, having grown up on a farm, would like nothing more than to live away from the city. But jobs were the main problem and in those days there weren't many extra jobs in the county just waiting to be filled.

Sam checked that all the suitcases and food box were packed. The dogs were in the back seat with the kids. The cats had been left behind in the city since they, being cats, could manage quite well for a weekend on their own. Once everyone was in the car, Sam and his wife did the usual last minute inventory. They had been doing this for so many Sundays they no longer had to think about it. The only thing left to do was gas up the car and since they still had almost half a tank, it could wait. It a cloud of dust, they pulled away from the cottage, already counting the days until their return the following Friday.

It was a hot day for early June. Sam hoped the heat would keep up and burn off the black flies that had tortured him all weekend. In those days no one had air conditioned cars. They rolled down their windows and enjoyed the breeze. So what if the wind tangled hair, ruffled magazine pages and blew the odd crayon drawing out the window. It also kept down the smell of two hotly panting dogs in the back seat and no fly or bug would last more than a second in that wind tunnel of a vehicle.

They were just hitting Minden when Sam thought he detected a smell. At first he wasn't sure if it was something they had passed on the side of the road or even if it was his imagination. But as the miles passed the smell persisted. In fact, began to think that it had increased. Since no one else in the car had made any comment, he wondered if it was all in his head. Maybe he had a brain tumor. They say one of the symptoms is strong odours that exist only in your mind.

Casting his eye on the gas gauge, Sam thought he had better pull into a station for a fill up. He was down past a quarter of a tank and once he hit the 401 there would be no stopping. A chance to briefly stretch his legs might make him feel better too and let him forget about this awful smell. Just as he pulled up to the pumps, one of the kids asked him what the smell was. The his wife remarked on it too. Everyone else had been afraid to mention it, thinking they were the only ones who could smell anything. Sam told them he didn't know, but thought they would soon drive out of it, what every it was.

The service station attendant wedged the nozzle into the gas tank and came around to the driver's side. He asked Sam if he should check the oil. Sam said sure, it was probably time for another quart, better check it. Fiddling with the release lever, the attendant fumbled for minute before he was able to open the hood of the car. When he did, Sam saw him out of the corner of his eye and thought the man was going to faint. He staggered sideways, his face suddenly taking on a strange greenish cast. He cheeks puffed up as though he was either going to whistle or throw up or maybe both.

"Did you see-," Sam began, turning to his wife but was stopped in mid-sentence.

"You better come out here Mister." It was the station attendant. He stood looking at Sam's car, not taking his eyes off it even as he called to Sam.

Opening the door with some trepidation, Sam wondered what on earth was wrong. The attendant continued staring at the car, under the hood really, as though unaware whether Sam had heard him or not. Moving to the front of the vehicle, the same smell that Sam had noticed while driving assailed his nose again, only stronger and more pungent than ever. He was about to ask the other man if there could be something wrong with his car when he followed the man's gaze under the hood.

There, tied to the engine with rope, was the fattest, ugliest sucker Sam had ever seen. It's pale body and protruding mouth seemed all the worse as it gave out a terrible stench in waves that rode upon the engine's heat. To even touch it was unthinkable yet he wouldn't, couldn't drive back to the city with that fish strapped to his car's engine. The smell would only get worse with every passing, heat-filled mile.

The he remembered his brother's threat to get even and laughed. Sam know how to take a joke.

Summer camp fund fulfills dreams

The Victoria-Haliburton Summer Camp Fund has launched its fifth season of helping make dreams come true for area youngsters.

Target for the 1989 fund-raising drive is $20,000, which will allow up to 100 children to attend one of several area summer camps for a week.

The Victoria-Haliburton Summer Camp Fund is designed to help youngsters from age 7 to 13 who would have no other means of attending camp and experiencing the benefits of such activity. The fund works closely with social service agencies throughout the two counties. Representatives of such groups form the selection committee.

To date, more than $7,000 has been received in donations from individuals and groups. Included is a $2,000 donation from the Loyal Order of Moose Lodge in Lindsay, and $600 from the Rotary Club of Minden.

Donations are tax deductible and can be made at any chartered bank or trust company in Victoria or Haliburton County.

For further information about the Victoria-Haliburton Summer Camp Fund, contact Austin Kirley, chairman, at (705) 324-6205.

Picking up the pieces after new-found freedom

The long journey toward freedom finally comes to an end after two years in a refugee camp for Anh Nguyen and her son Trieu.

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

IT'S BEEN NEARLY 10 YEARS since Thoai Bui, and his wife, child and brother escaped from Vietnam to a refugee camp in Malaysia—but he still remembers that first taste of freedom.

Bui says people travel to the Malaysian camps two ways, by foot or by boat. He was one of the boat people.

Bui's family escaped in a small-engine boat with only the clothes on their backs. "There was not enough food and we thought we'd never make it. When we got to the camp we felt like we were reborn."

"At that time there was a large amount of Vietnamese people who escaped the country," he says. "All over Canada were groups who sponsored the Vietnamese in the camps." Bui and his family were sponsored by the Presbyterian church in Cobourg.

Malaysia is considered the refugee's second country—sort of a middle ground. "They won't accept us to stay in Malaysia, but they provide us with a camp to stay before being accepted by a third country. Canada is my third country," he says with a smile.

And now, sitting in the living room of his Hillcrest Haven cottage, Bui can say he has helped two more people escape communist Vietnam, but not alone. His cousin, Anh Nguyen and her five-year-old son Trieu have been in Haliburton County for nearly a month. They have their sponsors, Haliburton's United Church of Canada, to thank.

"I tried to support their sponsorship, but the government wouldn't accept it," says Bui. "So I asked for help from the church to sponsor her to Canada. They did all the paperwork. They were a powerful backup for my family in case we couldn't take care of my cousin. They helped us by giving her clothes and things."

Nguyen had been in a refugee camp with her son for about two years. "She wrote me a letter after six months in the camp. But I found out I had no way to sponsor her. It took quite a long time to get her over."

Bui says there are many reasons why so many of the Vietnamese are trying to escape their homeland. "I was a south Vietnam soldier up until the communists took over in 1975. It was a very tough life then. Under the control of the communists life became poorer and poorer each year."

"They try in many ways to escape the country. Some walk through the country to get to Thailand. It is quite a long walk and very dangerous. There are so many bombs and mines to kill you. They are called the walk people. They walk through the jungles."

Dangerous escape

One can only imagine what sparks the determination to escape a country in such dangerous conditions. "By the time I left I just had one shirt and a t-shirt with me. I depends on the situation, some people left Vietnam and they brought clothes and money."

"But when the people get to the refugee camp we don't care what we have left behind. The sooner we can get out of the country, the better."

Even though Bui had no possessions after coming to Canada by boat, his main worry was a lack of English. "I went to a program in Cobourg, English as a second language, for a few months. But I mostly learned to communicate on the job." After a few years of working, Bui took an electronics course at Sir Sandford Fleming College. "Immediately after graduation I got a job offer from Halco." Bui has been working in Haliburton for five years now, and says he relishes his new life.

"Of course we have more freedom in this country. Working hard, you get a better life. You get more choice in this country than in the old country."

"I couldn't do anything because I was a soldier. I didn't work for the communists. I had to live with help from my mother and father."

Bui says his cousin had a rough time because her family was involved with the old government before the communists took over. "All she could do was sell to make a living. She had to sell fresh fish in the market-place. Everything after the communists took over became government property. Most of the stores belonged to the government. You had to work for the government. They would sell her the fish and she would sell it to the people."

Anh and Trieu Nguyen and Thoai Bui

Lucky to live in Canada

The Vietnamese don't even have control over their own homes, says Bui. "If you have a big house or a big building, the government would take over. The communists, they say everything belongs to you, but whenever the government wanted to they'd say we need this building, so you gave it to them."

"The government needs your car, you can't keep it. They control the people and take them right down to the poor level."

"After being almost 10 years in this country, I

"After being almost 10 years in this country, I feel pity for my people who still live in control of the communists in Vietnam. And I look at my life in Canada—I would say people in this country are very lucky."

feel pity for my people who still live in control of the communists in Vietnam. And I look at my life in Canada—I would say people in this country are very lucky. The people here should appreciate what they have."

Bui says those like Nguyen who used to work for the old government had a rough time under the communists. Even now that the war has been over for more than 13 years, people are still trying to escape from Vietnam.

"According to my cousin, life in the camp is better than when I was there. It was a crowded island, very small with sometimes up to 30,000 refugees living there. Food was provided by the United Nations and sometimes there just wasn't enough for everyone. But most of the people would never complain."

Bikers peddle their way toward a cure for CF

Jason and Taylor Loughheed

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Members of the community peddled their way to their goal on Sunday, and raised over $2100 for cystic fibrosis research in the Jason Loughheed Bike-a-thon.

The idea for the bike-a-thon began when three Archie Stouffer Elementary School students read an article in the newspaper about Jason Loughheed, a baby in the community who has cystic fibrosis (CF). Ted Pipe, and two of his friends, Andrew Shapcott and Jarett Wright approached the Kinsmen and Kinettes Club after their grade 8 teacher told them the school would be unable to organize the event.

Cystic Fibrosis is the Kinsmen's principle charity, and the members of the organization eagerly took on the responsibility of helping the students organize the event. Three hundred pledge sheets were made up and distributed at the school, and throughout the community.

Approximately 40 people participated in the event, starting off at the fair grounds at 1:00 p.m., and travelling down Deep Bay Road for two miles before heading back to the fair grounds for barbecued hot dogs and cold pop.

Members of the Kinsmen Club were overwhelmed by the response of the community, and by the number of people that participated in the bike-a-thon.

"It was the greatest thing we've experienced since working with CF," says Norma Amyotte, of the Kinettes Club. "The kids amazed us by getting out there and doing this for Jason."

The bike-a-thon, which was promoted as a fun day for the whole family, was so successful that Amyotte is confident it will become an annual event.

"I don't think we'll be able to stop now," she said. "It went too well."

Fifteen month old Jason was not diagnosed as having CF until he was almost six months old. He had been ill, and was at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto being tested for a variety of illnesses before a liver intern suggested he be tested for CF.

"She (the intern) was covering for the liver specialist (at this time they thought Jason may have some sort of liver disorder)," said Gidget Loughheed, Jason's mother. "We told her about his cough, and that he tasted salty, and she suggested a sweat chloride test."

Testing discovers disease

The sweat chloride test is used to determine the amount of salt in the sweat. The inside of the arm, where you sweat the least, is stimulated to produce sweat. Gauze is placed on the arm, which is then wrapped in Saran Wrap for half an hour. The gauze is then taken to the lab, and the sweat chloride molecules are counted. If salt levels are high, CF is considered a possibility.

Doctors are still unsure what relationship sweat has with CF. The disease, which is diagnosed in young children, causes the mucus glands to produce a thick, gluey, mucus that blocks the tubes in the lungs, making it difficult for the child to breathe.

The mucus also affects digestion, by blocking the flow of pancreatic enzymes needed for food to be digested. It is hard for a child with CF to digest fat particles. As a result, Jason is fed a pre-digested formula rich in fat. He is also given lots of gravies and sauces to compensate for the fat he is losing.

"The ideal amount of fat loss is 13 to 15 per cent," says Mrs. Loughheed. "Jason is still losing as much as 20 per cent. When he was first diagnosed it was

Please turn to page 18

PEOPLE

CF changes lifestyle of family

up to 40 per cent. No one could live with that."

By the end of August Jason will be able to stop taking his special formula, and start drinking homogenized milk. Mrs. Loughheed says the new routine will make life a lot easier for them.

"The formula was not very nice smelling," she says. "And now when we travel we won't have to take all sorts of additives (they had to add sugar and fat to the formula), and if he's thirsty we can just stop at Becker's and get him a drink."

Jason has to be fed at regular times, and given snacks as well. Although he has difficulty keeping food in his stomach, and he is smaller than most children his age, Jason has grown quite quickly since Christmas.

"He's gotten a little bit taller, and he is now a whopping 21 pounds (four more than he weighed in January)," says Mrs. Loughheed.

Overall, his health is improving. He hasn't had any colds or had to go to his family doctor for two months, and he won't have to make a trip to Sick Kids for his check-up until the end of the summer.

"It is really working out well," says Mrs. Loughheed. "I think we're over the worst of it. The doctors told us the first year would be the worst."

A genetic disease

Cystic Fibrosis is a genetic disease which has to be passed on to a child from both parents. One in every 20 people carries the gene for CF, and there is a 25 per cent chance that the child will contract the disease if both parents are carriers. An estimated one in every 1800 children born in Canada each year has CF.

Although there is no cure for cystic fibrosis, the disease can be treated, and due to improved technology the average life expectancy of a person with the disease has risen from 4 years in 1960 to more than 20 years of age.

Jason has to undergo a physiotherapy treatment twice each day. Every morning and every evening Jason has to wear aerosol mask through which he breathes a solution to dilate his bronchial tubes, and loosen the mucus in his lungs.

However, Jason has reached the age, where he doesn't really want to have a mask on his head. As soon as his mother puts it on, he reaches up and pulls it off, heading for the nearest toy. Mrs. Loughheed scoops him up, puts him back on her knee, and tries again, only to have the same results. The process takes longer, due to all the disruptions.

"I'm always saying that I'm going to make myself velcro pants, and make him a velcro jumpsuit," she says. "Then I could just snap him on so he couldn't get away."

Following the aerosol treatment, Mrs. Loughheed places Jason over her legs and gently taps his chest with cupped hands. The lower lungs of the lobes are worked on in the morning, and the upper lobes are treated in the evening. The physiotherapy loosens the mucus in Jason's lungs and allows it to be brought up.

"Even though he doesn't like it he knows he'll feel better after he has his treatment. He'll breathe better," says Mrs. Loughheed.

There is some flexibility in the physiotherapy program. If Jason is restless and Mrs. Loughheed is unable to complete the program in the morning, she can do another session in the afternoon. She says that sometimes this is beneficial.

"Sometimes it is easier to break up the mucus and move it around if you stop, and then try it again later," she says. "If he charges around for a little while, and then stops and has a cough, we know things are moving."

Cystic Fibrosis has had a big effect on every member of the Loughheed family. Jason's older brother, three-and-a-half-year-old Taylor is only now coming to terms with what Jason's illness.

"It still bothers him to see what he saw when Jason was sick," says Mrs. Loughheed. "He remembers when Jason was airlifted by helicopter to the hospital, when he was tube-fed, the IV's, and medicines. He gets very concerned when Jason gets sick."

For Gidget, and Jason's father, Lawrence, it means a complete change in lifestyle.

"It makes a better person out of you," says Mrs. Loughheed. "People tell me I could run a corporation after organizing his schedule. But it is very stressful. Whenever he seems to be getting sick I worry. To have to go back to the hospital is terrible. There is always a chance he will get sick, and not get better."

"And as far as becoming a career woman when the kids go to school, no boss would understand me leaving my job two or three times a year because my child is in the hospital. You really find out what is important to you."

The Kinsmen and Kinettes have started a training program for baby-sitters so that someone will be available to look after the children if the Loughheeds want a night out.

"It (the babysitting service) has been really great," says Mrs. Loughheed. "We have been busy at home lately and haven't been using the service much, but even if people aren't babysitting, they are getting a chance to meet the kids."

Researchers are still looking for the cure for cystic fibrosis, and Mrs. Loughheed says the key to finding a cure is money and public awareness.

"If you raise public awareness in your area, then people are more likely to send money," she says. "If we had even half the funds that cancer research has, they would have a cure."

The need to raise public awareness, as well as funds, is what makes the bike-a-thon such a good idea, says Mrs. Loughheed.

"I think it's really nice that the kids chose to raise money for any charity. It's especially nice that they chose to donate to CF."

"A bike-a-thon is good because it is physical activity, and that is doubly important for a CF child," she says. "And it will help Jason to be accepted in the community. People won't be afraid if they know what is wrong."

Life different in old country

They were just happy to get away from the old country."

By the time Bui was living in the refugee camp, he spent most of his time thinking soon he would be living in a new country. "I knew I would have a chance to re-build my life again."

"When I came to Canada I tried to learn English as much as I could and go to work. I have freedom in this country. I can do whatever I can to take care of my children."

Bui now has two daughters, Trang, 10, and Christi, 8, and an 18-month-old son, David. He says Canada is a great country for children to grow up. "All our dreaming and our hope we put on our children. Hopefully they will have a much better life than their parents had before."

Celsius in the rainy season to 36 degrees Celsius when it's dry.

"At first Anh said, 'Geez, how could you live almost 10 years in this country?' I said, don't worry, soon you'll get to like it."

And even after a month in the country, Nguyen still hasn't gotten used to the food. Most Canadians find it hard to understand how someone could balk at roast beef and hamburgers, but for the Vietnamese these are unusual dishes indeed.

"You go to a restaurant and you taste a strange food. There's nothing wrong with the food, but you don't feel like eating it."

Vietnam has a rich fishing industry, so Nguyen is used to eating lots of seafood and freshwater fish. "We still have pork and beef, but now these have become very expensive in the country," says Bui.

"When I came to Canada I tried to learn English as much as I could and go to work. I have freedom in this country. I can do whatever I can to take care of my children. All our dreaming and all our hope we put on our children. Hopefully they will have a much better life than their parents had before."

Bui sees little problem in five-year-old Trieu learning English. "The children communicate with each other really good."

However, it will take a while for Nguyen to learn the language. "She's very happy, but it's a big shock for her to get in this country. I can understand the feeling because I was in the same boat."

"I've been talking with her. We try to teach her some English, and as soon as she understands she can look for a job and start taking care of herself and her son."

"That's a problem, though. She didn't have any skills to work in Vietnam" because there were few job opportunities. "She'll be looking for general work as soon as she can learn enough English."

"And all the food is prepared different in Vietnam. We eat steak, but it's made differently. The Vietnamese have a different way of cooking."

In his family, every few days they cook Canadian, and every few days Vietnamese. "It looks very common to my eyes now. I couldn't even tell the difference. But now and then we'll have a comment from Anh, 'Oh this doesn't taste good. What am I eating?'"

One thing Bui had trouble accepting was food eaten cold. "I couldn't eat things like ham when I first came here. All our food is eaten hot. We live in a hot country, we eat hot food. It's funny. It should be the other way around."

Little Trieu has found no trouble in adjusting to his new life, though. He even likes fast foods like the all-American hamburger.

"The boy seems to be doing all right. So far he has been at his first day at school for a one day trial when we applied for kindergarten. He did really good and even brought home some drawings. And he eats Canadian food better than his mother."

Although a bit shy, Trieu has already started to learn some English. His mother is learning too, starting with words like 'hello,' 'good morning' as well as the alphabet.

"It's very tough for us. However, we are happy to be in this country. I want to express my appreciation and thanks to the church for giving me all their help and kindness."

Adjustments to make

There are two things Nguyen has found very difficult accepting, however. The weather and the food.

"By the time she got here in Haliburton there was still some snow and ice on the grass. She thought this must be a very cold country. The weather, the customs and the food here are totally different. Myself, I had a very rough time to adjust with the small things in this country. We learn these things slowly."

There are two seasons in Vietnam. Six months of the year it is hot and dry. The other six months are hot and rainy. "Even to me here it is very cold." In Vietnam the weather will be from 28 degrees

MORE AND MORE CUSTOMERS AND COMMUNITY LEADERS AGREE: RETAIL POSTAL OUTLETS OFFER BETTER SERVICE FOR YOU.

"IT'S A DEFINITE ADVANTAGE FOR US."

Jeff Scott, businessman, Alma, Ontario

Retail Postal Outlets across the country offer Canada Post customers more access to postal products and services. On average, hours of postal service operation have more than doubled in communities where service has changed from a post office to a Retail Postal Outlet operated by local business. Thousands of rural Canadians can now purchase stamps or pick up mail in the evening or on weekends.

Senior Games

By NORMA HODGSON

The first event of the Haliburton District Senior Games was held on Tuesday, May 23 at the Royal Canadian Legion in Haliburton. Euchre drew 140 participants from all areas of the county, and although after the game many were heard to say "I just didn't get the cards" everyone had fun. The games were ably convened by Joyce and Jack Hills, both wearing the distinctive Highland Tartan vests. They were assisted by Lenore and Hadden Gillespie. Euchre Play offs will be held on May 30 at the Drop-In-Centre, and the winners of that day will be competing with Muskoka in September.

On Wednesday, May 24, Marion and Stuart Ried donned the Tartan Vests to convene the bowling competition at Carnarvon Lanes. One bowler said she hadn't bowled in 15 years, but still came up with an enviable score. Of the 65 bowlers competing on Tuesday, 36 will return to the alleys a week later for the play offs.

Duplicate Bridge at the Drop-In-Centre on Thursday May 25 saw 20 people in competition. They will have their play off on June 1. Convenor for the Duplicate Bridge is Alex McLeod.

The social convenors, Cecile McLeod and Shirley Hodgson have arranged tea and lemonade served at all events. The registration convenors, Joyce Hills and Audrey Deremo, worked for days before the competitions to get the registrations in order, as has the convenor chair-person, Norma Crewson.

The Senior Games are off to a flying start and continue through the month of June — Senior Citizen's month.

BUSINESS NEWS

The Home Show is back for 11th year

More exhibitors will offer a wide array of services throughout the weekend

Summer is almost here and that means its time for the annual Home and Vacation Show at the Dysart arena in Haliburton. The show has been a popular event on the local calendar, and this year should prove to be no exception. Whether you're building a new home or thinking of renovating, looking for a new boat and motor or a new set of wheels for those summer escapes, you'll find a great deal to look at and think about at the Home and Vacation Show. More than 60 businesses from across Haliburton County and beyond will be represented at the show, and the atmosphere is conducive to those friendly chats and leisurely questions that can't always be asked in the hustle and bustle of main street business.

This year's show is once again sponsored by the Haliburton Curling Club, which agreed to take over the job of organizing the show from the Kinsmen Club, which initiated it in 1978 and ran it for the past eight years.

Exhibitors scheduled to participate in this year's show include: Coneybeare Motors, Frontier Motors, Shamrock Service Centre, Elstone Motor Sales, R. Hope Satellite, Highland Glass, Koshlong Marina, Walker's Heating and Cooling Systems, Haliburton Highlands Golf Club, The Nook, Newbatt's Furniture and Appliances, Nothshore Lawn and Garden, Momentum Marketing Systems, The Finishing Touch, Ideal Enclosure Systems, Pat Murphy Construction, Homestead Carpets, Wicker Works, Hilltop Electric, Electrolux Canada, Windsurfinn, Dafor Kitchens, Epsilon Satellite, Backwoods Marina, Galaxy Construction, Don Elfner Satellite TV, Haliburton Machine and Manufacturing, Brian Devon Sales, R and D Gifts, Bonnie Crafts, Huntsville Sewing Centre, Iron Kettle Maple Products, Gord Daniels, Ministry of Natural Resources, Tamarack Lace, Masters Book Store, Haliburton Information centre, The Guild of Fine Arts, Slimmer-Trimmer-U, Kawartha Water Treatment, Logan Barbeque Service, Persini Windows, Louis Weber, Weed Man, Snowbird Knitting, Beaver Valley Sausage, Windy Ridge Studios, H. Grewall Knives, John Slavik Paddles, Kawartha Dairies, Culligan Man, College Pro Painting, Ashley Investments, and Ekay Pumps, among others.

Legion speaks for students

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

J.D. Hodgson Elementary School and Haliburton Highlands Secondary School students were honoured by the Royal Canadian Legion, Haliburton Branch 129 on Monday, for excellence in public speaking.

The students, from grades four and up, participated in the legion sponsored public speaking contest, and advanced from their class, to the school, to the legion finals. While the children performed well, none made it to the next level of competition, the zone finals.

However, at the assembly David Stirrett, the youth education officer encouraged the children to start thinking about next year's competition as soon as they got home.

"It takes a lot of work, but I want you to try it," he said. "Let's have half a dozen of you on a nice airplane trip to Ottawa with your parents for the finals."

The children spoke on a variety of topics, and each child could choose what they wanted to talk about. Each child was responsible for researching, writing, and delivering a speech to their peers. Only a few made it to the top.

"Public speaking is not an easy thing, as you remember from when you had to write your speech and present it to your class," Gerry Irish, the vice-principal at J.D. Hodgson told the crowd of children.

"Now we are here to honour you."

The Legion took over the sponsorship of the public speaking contest many years ago, after the school trustees, and Hydro both quit sponsoring them. "The Legion took over the gauntlet and carried on," said Irish.

The idea of the contest is to provide another way for the children to learn, and to develop a friendship between the veterans and the students.

"The contest shows that the vets have an interest in the youth," said Stirrett. "We are trying to instill a fellowship so that the children will further the legion's objectives when we are gone. It is also to further their education."

The high school students were judged by elementary school teachers at the legion finals, while the elementary school students were judged by high school students. The participants received a cheque and a certificate for making it to the finals.

Jack Bassett, the secretary of the Legion, says the children's work is constantly improving.

"Over the last three years the quality of the work has improved greatly," he said. "And that is what the program is all about."

The finalists in this years competition are:

Grades 4 to 6 — Todd Hoare on Beavers; Michael Hartwick on Bobby Orr and Hockey; Robert Sisson on Venus; James Thivierge on Music Rapping; Patricia Vaughan on Sisters; and Sarah Vaughan on Dreams.

Grades 7 and 8 — Mark Morissette on Most Embarrassing Moments; Pat Bradley on Excuses; Laura Chumbley on Drinking and Driving; Sajo Longworth on Eating Disorders; Melissa Forgrave on Moving; and Tammy Moore on Casa Loma.

Highschool — Catya Hynard on Spring Cleaning; Jenna Stutt on Brothers; Dulce Acero on Abortion; and Saskia Smith on being a Member of a Large Family.

Mark Morissette receives award

Members take branch into 21st century

by MABEL BRANNIGAN

At the June 1 general meeting, the members set the stage for moving Branch 129 into the 21st century by giving the executive a mandate to rent a computer with the option of buying. This will be installed immediately.

Approximately 50 members from Branch 129 attended the D-Day celebrations in Lindsay on Saturday. This included the band and colour party.

Good luck to the seniors golf team who will play off with the other branches of Zone F "4" at Beaver Downs in Beaverton. Our team will include David Geary, John Craig, Jack Fleming and Fred Knight. They will have a busy day being on the course at 7:00 AM and returning for the Presidents' Ball that evening.

The Highland Games being hosted by the Haliburton County Chamber of Commerce will be held in Glebe Park on June 24. At the last general meeting Comrade Don Johnston requested that if any branch members would do volunteer work for that day, it would be appreciated by the Chamber of Commerce.

Comrade Dave Stirrett did an excellent job in presenting his public speaking awards at the elementary school on June 5. He was assisted by Comrades Bassett, Brannigan, Chambers and Whittaker. Comrade Gerry Irish, vice principal, as usual, was responsible for the smooth operation of this function.

The Ladies Auxiliary are having an extremely heavy catering schedule this month along with a flea market on June 24. Their last general meeting for the year will be held on June 26.

WOW keeps kids from quitting

I like to break traditions, and it's hard to do around here sometimes.

The kids who will be involved in the WOW program are a good target group because they are still deciding about their futures at the ages of 14 to 16, says Whittaker. "I don't think they are really aware that there are agencies that can help.

"I feel there's good in everybody. You can't just say they are bad kids so let them drop out. I don't believe that.

Also, Whittaker says the job market could get more competitive, leaving drop-outs behind. "A lot of people are moving up from the city and they have degrees. There's other people who have more job experience. Our kids need to have an edge.

"Some guys know they can always get a construction job. But for girls there's not an awful lot of jobs that are going to pay you more than $5 an hour.

"I think the interest is there to help the kids. You just have to direct them a little."

There are a wide variety of jobs available, and young people need to learn their options for the future, says Whittaker. "Some kids are looking at jobs they would never be capable of doing, like if a student who has trouble with studies and likes working with senior citizens thinks she can become a nurse. She needs to know she's not being realistic, but that there are a wide variety of other jobs she can do. In Extencicare there are a lot of different areas to fill, like laundry, cooking and cleaning." One area which is increasing in the county is child care, she says, especially with a growing number of mothers working outside the home.

"A lot of these kids are so down on themselves they think they can't do anything. They have to have these experiences. They could work in a bakery or do landscaping for a flower shop. There are so many possibilities."

And some children just don't understand how difficult it is to survive without an education. "These kids think you can honestly live off of $5 an hour. They just don't know. They're parents buy all their food and clothing for them.

Whittaker hopes to give students the incentive to work. "Some people think it's acceptable to work all summer and sit around on welfare all winter. We have to tell them, no, it's not okay. You get out there and you get working.

"If you want to make more money it's okay to work two jobs in given year. If they're working in construction they just can't help that there's no work in the wintertime. But surely there's something else to do besides sitting at home."

It's especially difficult to get kids in this area interested in furthering their education if they plan on moving back because wages are low, says Whittaker. "They figure, 'If I'm only going to make $7 an hour, why should I go to college?' There's also a problem with a lack of places to rent in Haliburton, so I'd like to spend a day showing them how it would be trying to find a place."

Whittaker stresses that parents should be an integral part of the program, and wants to keep them involved in their child's progression. She feels it's important to keep the lines of communication open, and is willing to meet with students and parents who are interested in the Kinark-sponsored program. She can be reached at 457-3741 or 457-2555.

Happy 100th

Extencicare resident Mary Young celebrated her 100th birthday with her family and friends on June 1. Five generations donned their party hats and joined in the festivities.

Zucchini may lead to veggie victory

The Minden Agricultural Society (sponsors of the Haliburton County Fair) is this year conducting a zucchini growing competition for all Haliburton County children in Grades one to three inclusive.

Seeds are being distributed to these children through the schools. We would ask that parents encourage the children to plant the seeds and keep them watered.

They are requested to bring their largest zucchini to the Fair Grounds BEFORE 11:00 AM on August 19th, firmly tagged with name and address. They will be placed on a float which will be in the parade. The largest (by weight) will receive prizes. The co-operation of the parents will be greatly appreciated.

The Gospel Church Ladies from West Guilford brought the tea party as well as the birthday cake for the residents who had birthdays in May. They were Ida Schell, Jean Taylor, Alice Rivers and Marshall Harrison. Thank you ladies, we appreciate both very much.

Bingo Thursday night was called by Jim Carrell. Only a few attended, but we enjoyed it and thank Jim for a pleasant evening.

Evelyn came Friday for Bible study. This was our final study until next September or October. Have a happy summer Evelyn. At 2:00 o'clock we had a hymn sing let by Marjory Renick, Mrs. Warburton, Ruth Nesbitt, and Grace Coburn. The residents thank them sincerely.

In the evening Bill Payne, Eldon Deacon, George and Don came and played the guitars, violin and mouth organ for our entertainment.

Sunday my sister and her husband, May and Roy Cameron and their daughter Jacqueline from Peterborough took me to Haliburton and we had dinner with our sister-in-law, Wilda LaRue.

Pearl Lyle had her daughters Jean and Anna to see her. They went down to quilt since it was arts and crafts day.

Sunday night chapel service was taken by Rev. John Burgess.

We are busy preparing tickets for a draw at the fair this fall to help us get a new bus. We are also having a walk-a-thon on June 14, 1989. We are looking for walkers and sponsors.

Since no one wished to play cards Tuesday afternoon, Doris and Linda took us for a bus ride to Eagle Lake. Many of the residents really enjoy a bus

Guilford walkers help raise money

West Guilford participants in the Walk for Water included Jean Henderson, Trang and Christi Bui; Aleka, Sara, Eric and Caroline Lilius; Diane and Katharine Hagerman; John Henderson, now of Oshawa; Mike Umphrey; Blair and Lolita Schmalenberg all of Oshawa; and Faye Osborne from Hillcrest Haven. Rod Henderson and his daughter-in-law Judy, visited at check-points. Sheila Ziman from Line 25, was another walker from this area.

Maple Lake United Church was crowded with happy wedding guests to witness the marriage of Diane Cowen to Perry Peacock on Saturday evening. Some of those in attendance were Bert Cowen, Karl and Eileen Barry, Winnie Fader, Wes and Eve Stata, Charlie and Grace Morrison, Doris and Jimmy Cooper and their five daughters, Fred and Dot Cowen of Thessalon, Ada Lepine of Oshawa, Russell and Marilyn Cowen of Haliburton, Bill Cowen and Verna Sawyer, Ethel and Everett Upton and their families, and Bill and Donna Hartin of Donald whose daughter, Laurie, was one of the bridesmaids. Jack Mavor sang two selections accompanied by Kathleen Owens at the organ.

Welcome back to summer resident Grace Bellamy at Cranberry Lake.

Andy Cooper is home for two weeks from Victoria where he is attending Royal Roads Military College. He will be attending Laval University in Quebec City during the summer.

Relatives of Rod Smyth, son of the late Lila (Cooper) and Don Smyth will be interested to know that he phoned from Australia on Sunday to say he would be visiting here in the fall and probably participating in hunting season at the Cooper camp. Rod lives in Bathurst, N.S.W.

Sympathy is extended to the Ripley family in the loss of husband and father, Eugene, who was original owner of Rips-Sleepy Hollow in Pine Lake.

Cadets from this area who were part of the annual Cadet Inspection on Sunday were: David Morrison, son of Larry and Stella, Marcus Letourneau, son of Reg and Shirley, and Jerry Griffin, son of Neilson and Sheila.

Best wishes for good health to Peter Kanters who has been in hospital lately.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Sisson are very proud to announce the recent graduation of their eldest daughter, Donna-Lee, from Briercrest Bible College, Carleton Place, Saskatchewan. Donna-Lee graduated with an Associate of Arts Degree, and completed additional studies in camping, history and psychology. Donna-Lee anticipates future involvement in the field of camping and recreational programming, and looks forward to working with children and youth.

obligation to respect and protect it for future generations. The reason that tourists come here in ever-increasing numbers is to enjoy this beauty and to renew themselves in an environment that soothes nerves and psyches battered and jangled by the pace, the pollution and the noise of the city. No one can argue that snowmobiles (jetskis, trail-bikes, ATV's etc.) contribute to beauty or serenity. Who among us has not been woken up at 3:00 AM in January by a snow-machine? If Creighton Feir's figure of 8,000 skidoos on a weekend is accurate and if the HCSA figure of 7 percent of these being uncontrollable is true, then on any given weekend there are at least 560 irresponsible (often drunken) motorized vandals loose in the county. Do we really want to open the door to more of this threat to our peace and safety? If the proposed snowmobile loop is approved the irresponsible users of these machines will be able to travel anywhere in the county and leave the trail at any point to trespass on private property or roar around any lake they can get onto. Snowmobiles are, unfortunately, here to stay. (Unlike most European countries where they are prohibited for recreational use). Most snowmobilers are decent and responsible people but let's not invite a greater number of them into the county.

Now a word about the economy. First of all, it is booming as everyone knows. Given the uncontrolled growth of Metro Toronto and the desire for recreational space there is little danger of Haliburton County losing its appeal as a first-class tourist centre. Given the fact that well over 100,000 people come here to relax each year it is easy to see that snowmobile users constitute a very small minority of tourists.

Mrs. Edwards is right—we cannot be short-sighted about tourism. We need to take a long-range view of our potential as a world-class tourist haven. Let's do everything we can, therefore, to protect the natural environment and to preserve the peace and beauty tourists are willing to pay handsomely to enjoy. The old railway right-of-way could be kept as a place for: guided nature walks, bird watching, horse-back riding, bicycling (a booming sport), rock-hounding, etc. The Chamber of Commerce could take the lead in working with tour operators and Naturalist Federations to bring to Haliburton people who will fill our resorts, lodges, stores, restaurants, etc. all year round far into the future and go away renewed and having disturbed minimally the glorious environment they are so eager to pay to enjoy. Let's be positive and imaginative as Mrs. Edwards suggests and not ruin either the environment or the long-term economy of the county by accepting a minority's proposal. If we do so we'll be killing the goose that lays our collective golden egg.

Kenneth Golby

Congrats to Domer

The U.C.W. met on Wednesday night for its June meeting. A pot luck supper was held before the meeting, the last one until September. The yard sale and bake counter will be held in July and the annual summer dinner in August. Exact dates will be given in a later column.

Our congratulations to

Catherine Sennit on the creation of Domer, the blue and gold turtle that was chosen as mascot for the incredible Sky Dome. Her partner, Kari Siirala and his company Carina Toys, we also involved. Catherine was also the creator of the Wrinkles Dolls. Original from Finland, they moved into the village about six years ago. We are happy to know Domer was born in Carnarvon.

Strike of lightning sets off burglar alarms at home

KINMOUNT NEWS

by Millie Moss

Congratulations to Rick

Watson of Kinmount who was the 50/50 winner Saturday, May 27, of $144. The draw took place at Branch 441, Kinmount.

Happy anniversary to Bolly and Jon LeCrew of Norland who celebrated 35 years of married life on Monday, May 29. I'm told there was a very good attendance at the Norland Firefighters Annual Firewords display held at Norlands Ward Park over the holiday week end.

To catch up on the weekly winners of the Norland Volunteer Firemens

Hockey Pool: April 22, Cindy Pollard, April 29: Fern Eason, May 6: Brad Cooper, May 13: Tony Greer, May 21: Marg le Crew, all of Norland and on Cup Night May 25, the lucky winner was Nora Lee of R.R. 1 Kirkfield.

Sympathy to all family and friends of Carol Magee who died so suddenly recently.

Lightning hit the shed of Edna Birmingham at Head Lake May 31, burning it to the ground. The same night lightning set off alarms at a residence on Buller Road. No damage was done there but in all it kept the Norland Firefighters busy.

The Norland Opportunity Shop will again be open this year. Saturday, during June 1-4 P.M. Saturday and Tuesday 1-4 P.M. during July and August in the Community Hall basement.

To all of you who have been so kind to enquireing why so few columns from me of late, thank you and a special note of thanks to Les and Ada Thomas for their friendly remarks upon their return from Florida and to Bob Hollobon who is very ill in Sunnybrook Hospital who asked me if I was going to keep on writing. I hope you're feeling better soon Bob. Now here's the reason for my lack of columns recently. Bills' sister, Millie Cruickshank McIsaac of Toronto has been very ill for a long time and we received a call to go to Toronto General Hospital which we did and found Millie very ill and her family around her. We left there and drove to Sunnybrook to visit with Bob Hollobon, his wife, Jean was there and Bob was in good spirits. Since then, Bill and Win Wilson were in to visit with us and Win told us that Bob is now in a private room as he has come down with an infection. When we arrived home from hospitals, Bill phone Miami, Florida, to inform his other sister

Mame Campbell of Millies' condition and he was told that she's already received a call from a niece that Millie had died withing five minutes of our leaving her. We went to Toronto again the following Saturday for the funeral. On top of all this I have been working like the proverbial plow horse getting ready for a giant auction sale at our place plus packing the things I'm going to take with me when we move. Our new house hasn't even been started yet but we have our well drilled. I have this house literally torn apart getting things ready and we don't even have a place to stay yet, while waiting for our house. Between trying to get some good strong backed men to get the heavy stuff out for me and looking after all the other details at a time like this I just had to let the writing to. I apologise, but hang in there, you can't keep a good woman down!

Well folks, stay well and happy, read your paper and give me a call at 488-2353 if you wish to have your news in this column.

Lat report: June 1 eucbre results at the Kinmount Seniors Railroad Station Drop-In Centre: ladies high: Gladys Anderson, ladies low: Aileen Brown, mens high: Gord Taylor who also held most lone hands, mens low: Charlie Henderson.

Our own Vi Cooke will be leaving her Irondale home and moving to Minden on Saturday, June 3. Best wishes and many happy years in your new home Vi!

Dorset leaves unfurl in green

The busy season came in with a swirl on the first long week end of the year. The business people got a taste of what they can expect in the near future in the way of long working hours and busy times.

The coming of summer is evident in other ways, the grass growing like crazy, the leaves unfurling on the trees exhibiting that lovely light green that changes as they mature. And we mustn't forget the pesky black flies, a topic of conversation most everywhere. The lake water is warming up and will soon be inviting each and everyone to come in and try the waters.

The Dorset Senior Club enjoyed an evening of film, marching, pleasant conversation and a meal. The real excitement of the evening came when Sherborne councillor Joyce McKay, presented the President, Helen Sutton, with a cheque for $2,500, a grant to the club from the Township of Sherborne. This money is greatly appreciated and will be used to help finish the interior of the new addition. The club has over 50 members.

BOY! That was quite a party for my one hundred years of living and now I'm wondering how to say "Thank you" for all the wishes and gifts which meant a lot of help from a lot of people. Many of these we did not see such as those who delivered flowers from Nancy's in Haliburton. I have lost count how many. I think that nearly every person, far and wide in the community must have done something to make me happy. I cannot single out anyone but say a thousand "Thank You's". I would like to mention Mary Oliver's granddaughter who took the time to bring her grandma to see me, and my family for the display of pictures which seemed to be of interest to people and which acknowledged me as an English Canadian, and for arranging the whole affair that has given me a lot of happy memories to cheer me when I am lonely and unable to get about on my own. May Croft (Mrs. Wilfred Croft).

MY THANKS to the Tory Hill Pastoral Charge, the Support Committee and friends, my parents, Clarence and Ruth Bradley, my wife Carol and family, for gifts and help during my Recognition Service in Port Hope. Maurice Bradley.

God saw you getting weary, So He did what He thought best, He came and stood beside you, And whispered, "Come and rest." With farewells left unspoken, You quietly slipped away, It's lonely here without you George, I miss you more each day, For life is not the same for me, Since you were called away.

There will always be a heartache and often a silent tear, But always the precious memories of the days when you were here, We hold you close within our hearts and there you will remain. To walk with us throughout our lives until we meet again, Remembering you is easy, We do it every day, But missing you is a heartache, That never goes away, No one knows the grief we share, When the family meets and you're not there. A special smile, a special face, A special person we can't replace.
